The Market.

Official sources at Hyde Park said President Roosevelt will not close the New York Stock Exchange, while the President declined comment.—Page 2.

Rally Stops Breaks.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 19.—Amid confusion and bewilderment reminiscent of '29, the stock market came back strongly late today after the heaviest selling storm experienced in Wall Street since the Federal Government began "policing" the exchange in 1934.

Under a downpour of selling at the opening, prices of leading issues fell as much as $10 a share or more, as they did on Monday.

Some Losses Wiped Out.

More than 7,287,000 shares of stock changed hands—the largest turnover since the 9,000,000 shares in the wide break on July 21, 1933.

A sense of equilibrium came after the noon hour. In the last hour between 2 and 3 o'clock, with prominent shares displaying in some instances a striking comeback, there was a general rally in which many stocks wiped out all initial losses and closed higher for the day.

Chrysler, selling down almost $10 in the first hour, closed at $61, only $1.25 off from yesterday. United States Steel, off $7 at one time, was in the foreground of the leaders in the rally, closing 62 cents above Monday at $62.12. Allied Chemical & Dye, which fell $11, was off $2 at the close. American Telephone finished with a $2 loss at $147 a share, after being down $7. General Motors, down $7 at mid-morning, was up $2.25 at its last price of $38.25.

Commodities Also Sink.

Farm implements led the late comeback, International Harvester closing at $75, a gain of $7.50 over yesterday's finish, and Deere at $76.75, up $7.25. General Electric was another leader on the rebound, closing at $39.50, up $4.25, as was Standard Oil of New Jersey, finishing at $48.75, up $3.75. Net losses of 50 cents to as much as $8 predominated when the excited trading ended, however.

The wave of lower prices also swept commodity markets. Losses

Police Drag Pond For N. Y. Broker

White Plains, N. Y., Oct. 19 (AP).—Police Chief William Miller said today an automobile, coat and hat belonging to Maurice Lasser, a partner in the New York stock brokerage firm of Lasser Brothers, were found beside Kensico Reservoir.

State police began grappling.

Chief Miller said Lasser's car was reported missing last night by members of his family. The chief said the report did not list Lasser as a missing person.

Curb Roosevelt Power, Landon Urges Nation

Text—Page 30.

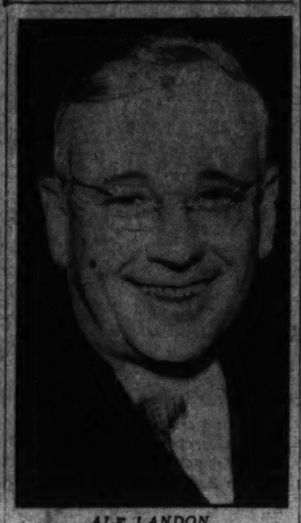
By the United Press.

Topeka, Kans., Oct. 19.—Former Gov. Alf M. Landon tonight asserted that President Roosevelt is feeding on power like a Caesar and demanded that he be deprived of some of it so that he will be compelled to take the advice of "experienced and practical men."

The Republican standard bearer of 1936, addressing a "radio mass meeting" he himself had called of the 17,000,000 persons who voted for him in his unsuccessful campaign for the Presidency, charged the President with violating "the letter and spirit of the Constitution."

It was his first comprehensive political pronouncement since his defeat.

With a vehemence suggestive of a campaign speech, Landon criticized the President for his Supreme Court enlargement proposal, asserting that he "wasted practically the entire session of Congress of 1937 fighting to get more power for himself." He charged that the Administration "used all its mighty power" to prevent public hearings on the appointment of Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black, in disregard of the Constitution.



ALF LANDON.

He struck at Mr. Roosevelt for letting "college sophomores" draft legislation such as the national recovery act, the social security law and tax statutes and criticized his

Suspect Seized In Knife Attack On G. W. Coed

A suspect in the brutal knifing and slugging of Ruth McMillen, 19-year-old George Washington junior and honor student, was arrested yesterday in Rock Creek Park near the scene of the attack.

Police said he lived in the 400 block G street northwest, a considerable distance from the park, and he was arrested when his loitering in Rock Creek Park in the rain attracted the attention of Motorcycle Officer W. C. Coleman, attached to the Eighth Precinct.

They said he answers Miss McMillen's description of her assailant and, if other lines of investigation prove fruitful, he will be taken before her for possible identification.

Chief among the leads which aroused hope that the man might be the assailant, police said, was the fact that residents of the house in which the suspect lives said he was wearing a blue suit Saturday afternoon, of the color Miss McMillen said the attacker wore, and that he has not worn it since.

Yesterday's suspect was the fourth to be arrested in connection with the brutal attack which dangerously wounded the George Washington coed when she was on her way to join a picnic with friends in the park Saturday afternoon.

The other three were released when they provided airtight alibis.

'Elixir' Fatal To 14 in West Is Seized Here

A gallon jar of the venereal disease "elixir" which recently took nine lives in Tulsa, Okla., and five in East St. Louis, Ill., was seized in the Capital late yesterday, The Post learned last night.

Walter G Campbell, chief of the Food and Drug Administration, said the shipment was consigned to a local retail drug store. It was the first batch of the dangerous chemical compound sent here, he declared.

Details as to place of seizure and names of shipper and consignee were withheld by Federal officials, launching a Nation-wide drive to confiscate the preparation wherever it is being sold.

In spite of the lethal qualities of the drug compound, which may be bought on prescription, it is subject to seizure only because it is labeled an "elixir."

"By our definition," said Campbell, "an elixir is a sweetened alcohol solution, something which this product apparently is not."

Whether the deaths were caused by diethylene glycol, used as a solvent, or the ingredient sulfanilamide, or a combination of both, remains to be determined, he asserted.

"The important thing is that at least 14 persons have suffered violent death after taking the product and its continued distribution must be stopped," Campbell added. "Although our investigation has brought out the fact that the compound has been on the market only since September 1, it has been sold in so many places that it is remarkable loss of life has not been far greater."

Although all 14 deaths have occurred in cities, Tulsa and East St. Louis, the "elixir" of sulfanilamide has been placed on sale principally

30,000 Armenians Ask Death Penalty For Consul Slayer

Beirut, Syria, Oct. 19 (AP).—Thirty thousand Armenian residents of Syria and Lebanon today addressed a petition to the Syrian government demanding the death penalty for Meguerdich Karayan, accused of slaying United States Consul General James Theodore Marriner.

The body of Marriner, who was slain last week by Karayan because he believed the American official had refused his request for reentry to the United States, was escorted from the Anglo-American church to the American Export liner Excambion today for return to the United States.

Meanwhile, three doctors examined Karayan to determine whether he is sane, preparatory to trying him November 2.

Heiress Divorced Over Drink Hurled For Duce 'Insult'

Reno, Nev., Oct. 19 (U.P.).—The Marchioness Natalia Fisher Catalano Gonzaga, California heiress, today won a divorce from Marquis Clemente Catalano Gonzaga, of Florence, Italy, because he threw a drink at her mother when she "insulted" Premier Benito Mussolini.

District Judge B. F. Cutler awarded the decree, contested since February 17, on her charge of cruelty and nonsupport.

Heavy Rains Cause 4 Deaths, Floods in D. C. Area and South

Cloudy skies and dropping temperature were predicted for Washington today, after a rainfall of 1.64 inches had been recorded in the 24 hours ended last night at 7:30 o'clock. o'clock.

There was no rain in sight for today, the forecaster said. Tomorrow will be fair also.

As high water was reported along the Speedway and the roads near the Peace Cross, at Bladensburg, storms deluged many Southern States, taking at least four lives.

In Virginia, John D. Hounihan, about 30, lost his blaance while walking a footbridge and his body was swept away by the swollen waters of Jennings Branch, a mountain stream near Buckhorn.

A woman was drowned near Macon, Ga. Police said she fled from her home in a rainstorm because she feared the rising waters would engulf it.

Planes Take Japan's Guns By Surprise

Chinese Airmen Swiftly Raid Japanese Line at Shanghai.

Invaders Launch New Offensive on All Major Fronts.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Wednesday), Oct. 20.—Chinese bombing planes raided Japanese lines in the Shanghai sector today with a mystifying absence of Japanese anti-aircraft fire.

Instead of blasting the heavens as they have done until now, the Japanese did not fire a shot against the Chinese, who made a lightning incursion, dropped a half dozen bombs and sped away. The damage was not disclosed.

The Japanese launched another major offensive on all fronts, apparently to expel the Chinese forces from the Shanghai zone before the Nine-Power Conference starts October 30 at Brussels to discuss the Far Eastern conflict.

Heaviest fighting on the Shanghai front was in the Tazang sector, less than 6 miles northwest of Shanghai, which has become the most vital salient on that front.

Chinese Reduce Gain.

Led by a fleet of tanks, the Japanese reached a point within 2 miles of Tazang while Chinese battled fiercely to turn them back. After one Japanese thrust, the Chinese were said to have launched a powerful counter-offensive that wiped out a Japanese half-mile gain.

Concentration on Tazang, Chinese declared, was a Japanese strategy to cut off Chinese supply lines to Chapei, where Shanghai's defenders are entrenched on the northern edge of the International Settlement.

Japanese authorities served notice that all trains, stations, warehouses and railroad equipment now are considered military objectives for bombing operations. They declared Chinese railways are transporting military supplies and some trains are armed with machine guns.

Rail Raids Kill, Hurt 100.

At the same time, advices from Hanchow asserted that repeated Japanese air raids on stations and passenger trains of the Hangchow-Shanghai line have killed or wounded more than 100 civilians within the last week. The report said none of the trains or stations contained war materials.

Japan's war machine in North China was definitely slowed and in some places completely halted, Peiping reports said. Dispatches from northern Shantung Province reported withdrawals of Japanese forces.

In Shansi Province, Japanese asserted they had captured virtually all positions around strategic Sinchow Pass, about 50 miles north of Taiyuanfu, the capital.

Although Japanese bombing planes gave Nanking, China's capital, its most severe pounding of the month yesterday, the city's apprehensions of renewed night raids during the full moon apparently were baseless.

U. S. Loss Set at 15 Millions.

Shanghai, Oct. 19 (AP).—After 66 days of warfare in Shanghai, American officials and business men estimated today that American financial losses from bombs, shells and fires were at least $15,000,000.

Foreign investments in Shanghai total about $3,300,000,000, and the total loss of all foreigners is expected to be many times that to Americans.

A survey by American Consul General Clarence E. Gauss showed casualties in the International Settlement and the French concession up to October 10 included 1,990 Chinese and 16 foreigners killed, including three Americans. A total of 2,803 Chinese and 27 foreigners had been wounded.

American insurance men point out that more than 65 per cent of American business investments in China are concentrated in Shanghai.

Snite in Atlanta, Journey Costing Dollar a Breath

Atlanta, Oct. 19 (AP).—Fred B. Snite estimated today he was spending $1 for each breath drawn by his paralyzed son, Fred, jr., on the 1,497-mile train trip from Chicago to Miami—approximately $20,000 a day.

The $2,300 "iron lung" encasing young Snite functions at the rate of 15 times a minute.

The father, a wealthy banker, said a Swedish specialist had been retained, four railway coaches had been chartered, and seven nurses, two doctors and two male orderlies are in constant attendance on the boy.

Russia Turns Against Paris To Aid Spain

Britain and France Study Independent Action for Peace.

Soviet Vow to Loyalists Deadlocks Nonintervention Efforts.

Text of Speech—Page 30.

The European Crisis.

Britain and France studied "independent action" against Italian participation in the Spanish civil war, after Russia joined Fascist powers in bluntly rejecting a French compromise on withdrawal of Il Duce's "volunteers" from Spain.

France prepared to dispatch an air armada for maneuvers over her possessions in North Africa, and gave former Premier Albert Sarraut virtual dictatorial powers over colonies there.—Page 4.

Spanish insurgents captured the key town of Villaviciosa, opening a clear road to the city of Gijon, last loyalist stronghold in northeast Spain. A British freighter was reported sunk in the Bay of Biscay by rebel warplanes.—Page 4.

Independent Action.

By the United Press.

London, Oct. 19.—Great Britain and France tonight discussed a course of "independent action" in the Spanish crisis after an unexpected Russian stand caused virtual collapse of the nonintervention committee's efforts to find a basis for withdrawal of Italian and other foreign volunteers from Spain.

In sub-committee session today, Russia, turning against France with whom she is allied in Europe's mightiest military pact, precipitated the deadlock by turning down a French compromise proposal because she is committed to a loyalist victory in Spain. She found strange bedfellows in Europe's Fascist bloc—Germany, Italy and Portugal—which flatly rejected any compromise because of support of Generalissimo Franco's insurgents.

The Franco-British discussions, crammed with possibilities of open conflict, conformed with warnings from London and Paris that unless a speedy solution was found for the "volunteers" problem they would take matters in their own hands and bring about a European showdown.

Accord Nearly Dead.

A spokesman said the whole nonintervention structure built on the "hands-off-Spain" pledges of 27 nations, has "only a few hours to live."

Behind these warnings, openly voiced by British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, lay threats to reopen the Franco-Spanish frontier, permit unrestricted arms shipments from Britain and perhaps even stage a naval occupation of the Spanish Balearic Island of Minorca to prevent Italy from taking it over.

Only Sweden, representing the Baltic group of "conscience" nations, neutral Belgium and Czechoslovakia of the Balkan and Little Entente, supported Britain and France on the French plan.

The plan provided for a consideration of belligerent rights for the Spanish factions—a decided advantage for Franco, giving him the right of limited blockade of the Spanish coasts under international law—after a "symbolic" withdrawal of volunteers from both sides.

Death Stills Fear Of Fire Carried by Woman 66 Years

Nothing ever again will frighten Margaret Monticue, who lived in fear most of her more than 85 years.

She was buried yesterday in Alexandria with Catholic rites and Alexandria's colored community stirred briefly again with the mystery that has lived among them as long as most themselves have lived.

Margaret was a young woman on May 19, 1871, when the big market house at Alexandria went up in flames and smoke, and citizens fought it feebly and the angry red painted the sky, while sparks rained on the helpless city. It was something she never forgot until the moment she remembered nothing at all.

So powerful was this flaming memory that it bound Margaret Monticue to her small home across the canal basin with the impervious bonds of terror. From that day she never crossed the basin and for many years never left her home.

The fire that burned the Alexandria market house and the Alexandria-Washington Masonic Lodge with its priceless Washington relics, burned something it never touched.

It burned the heart out of Margaret Monticue.

U. S. Enters Peace Talks Uncommitted to Other Powers, Roosevelt Says

Davis as Delegate To Depart Today

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 19.—President Roosevelt asserted in a formal statement tonight that America would enter the nine-power treaty conference on the Sino-Japanese conflict "without any commitments on the part of this Government to other governments."

The statement, issued after a long conference between the President and Norman H. Davis, head of the American delegation to the conference to be held at Brussels October 30, was generally accepted as a reply to an assertion by Senator Johnson (Republican) of California, hinting that the United States and Great Britain had agreed in advance on a program of action.

The President cited the language of the invitation to the conference—to the effect that the powers would examine the Far Eastern situation and "study a peaceable means of hastening an end of the regrettable conflict which prevails there."

No Commitments.

He also called attention to his radio address of October 12 in which he said the conference would "seek by agreement" a solution of the undeclared war and added it would be the purpose of America, in seeking that solution, to co-operate with the other signatories to this treaty, including China and Japan.

"Mr. Davis, of course," he added, "will enter the conference without any commitments on the part of this Government to other governments."

The text of the President's statement follows:

"Mr. Davis is going to Brussels to represent this country at a meeting of the signatories of the Nine-Power Washington Treaty, in response to an invitation issued by the Belgian government.

"The purpose of the conference is in conformity with the regional pledge made by the parties to the Nine-Power Treaty in 1922 to have full and frank exchange of views with regard to the Far Eastern situation.

Recalls Broadcast.

"In the language of the invitation to which this Government is responding, the powers will examine the situation in the Far East and study a peaceable means of hastening an end of the regrettable conflict which prevails there.

"As I said in my radio broadcast on the evening of October 12—the purpose of this conference will be to seek by agreement a solution of the present situation in China. In our efforts to find that solution, it is our purpose to co-operate with the other signatories to this treaty, including China and Japan.

"Mr. Davis, of course, will enter the conference without any commitments on the part of this Government to other governments."

After his October 12 "fireside" address the President told a press conference the first step of the Brussels meeting would be an attempt to mediate the Sino-Japanese conflict.

Johnson, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate, issued a lengthy statement entitled, "The Road to War."

He said the same type of propaganda that led America into the World War "today befools and bemuses us. Americans must not forget."

Serial Numbers Of Ross Kidnap Bills Broadcast

$50,000 Paid Abductors by Family of Rich Chicago Victim.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—A Nation-wide hunt was pressed today for kidnapers who collected $50,000 ransom but failed to release aged Charles S. Ross.

Spurred by knowledge the family had been double-crossed, Federal agents and State's attorney detectives hurled their full force into the search for the snatch gang.

A trap similar to that set in the Lindbergh case was baited across the country. The Government sent a complete list of the serial numbers of 5,250 bills given the abductors to Department of Justice bureaus, police stations, newspapers, banks and business houses from coast to coast in hope that the mobsters would be caught when they sought to cash in on their crime.

Some investigators held belief the Ross case would prove a parallel to the Lindbergh tragedy with the ransom collected after the victim had died. The retired manufacturer has been missing 24 days.

The official premises were these:

1. Ross, 72, and suffering from heart disease, had succumbed in the hands of his captors or had been murdered to prevent their identification.

2. He was still held captive somewhere in the United States until the snatchers could perfect plans for a flight.

Government operatives disclosed the ransom consisted of $10,000 in $5 bills, $25,000 in $10 bills and $15,000 in $20 bills.

Leo Carillo Announces Race for Governorship

San Francisco, Oct. 19 (AP).—Leo Carrillo, motion picture actor, said in an interview here today he "expected to be a candidate for the nomination for Governor of California, if not at this coming election, then assuredly at the next."

Carrillo said he was informed there already were 560,000 votes pledged to him.

Mrs. Prichett Died on Flight To Visit Putnam

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Oct. 19.—Mrs. Campbell Prichett, Washington society woman and newspaper writer, who was one of 19 victims of the plane crash in Utah, was en route to Los Angeles to visit George Palmer Putnam, husband of Amelia Earhart, lost ocean flier.

Putnam said Mrs. Prichett was a family friend of long standing.

Bodies Recovered.

By the Associated Press.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Oct. 19.—The bodies of the 19 persons who were killed in the crash of a luxurious air liner in the Uinta Mountains Sunday were brought out of the rocky wilderness tonight and taken by truck to Evanston, Wyo.

Ground crews toiled all day over treacherous trails, conquering deep snow, steep, slippery canyon walls and the menace of landslides, to reach the scene of the Nation's greatest airplane disaster.

A number of relatives already have assembled at Evanston to claim their dead.

Among the victims were two Washingtonians, the socially-prominent Mrs. Campbell Prichett and Charles D. Renough.

Postal inspectors and Bureau of Air Commerce representatives prepared to visit the scene of the disaster. The United Airlines proceeded with its study, and the Utah

Alienist Questioned In Death of Girl, 16

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 19 (U.P.).—Dr. Douglas W. Owen, 36-year-old psychiatrist with a "hobby for crime," tonight was questioned by deputy sheriffs in connection with the investigation of the slaying of 16-year-old Melba Moore on a lonely road near here last Tuesday night.

Four days after the girl was slain, Dr. Owen, a tall and heavy-set man, disappeared from his home and did not return until Monday, Sheriff William Hosinski said.

Harrisonburg Mayor Missing, Believed Dazed by Car Crash

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 19.—Search was begun today under direction of State and city police for Mayor John Morrison of Harrisonburg, 62-year-old Republican member of the Virginia House of Delegates from Rockingham County, missing since yesterday.

No word has been heard from Mayor Morrison since his automobile was found ditched yesterday at Spiders Church, seven miles from here. The automobile was little damaged and contained the mayor's mail and a quantity of campaign cards, indicating that it had not been tampered with.

He was picked up near the place his car was ditched by Sam Keller, farmer, and driven to a point one mile from North River at Rockland Mill, 14 miles south of here. Keller said he appeared to be uninjured and entirely normal.

Later, about noon yesterday, police said, Mayor Morrison was seen by a Mrs. Payne walking along the road in front of her home 200 yards from the river where it is crossed by an iron bridge.

Late tonight, balked by darkness and rising water, searchers gave up for the night, intending to continue tomorrow. Friends of the mayor expressed belief he may still be wandering dazed by the minor wreck of his automobile.

The mayor's family did not make his absence known until this morning, although his abandoned car was reported last night. Early reports were he had been found but, when these proved groundless, the city's two fire companies joined police in the search.

White House To Keep Hands Off Exchange

President Refrains From Comment on Recent Security Breaks.

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 19.—Informed sources said today President Roosevelt would refrain from invoking his power to close the New York Stock Exchange.

While further stock declines failed to draw any statement from the Chief Executive himself, officials let it be known he had no intention of asking the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington to suspend trading. He has that authority under the stock exchange regulation act.

The President threw no light on what plans, if any, are under consideration by Federal officials to check the down-swing in security values.

Will Return to D. C.

He had no thought of referring to the subject in his speech in Washington tomorrow afternoon dedicating the new Federal Reserve Board Building. There had been speculation he might in view of efforts by some to have the board reduce its 55 per cent margin requirement to ease the market.

The President turned toward Washington tonight after a week at the summer White House. He will return here Saturday to remain until after election day, November 2.

The press interview covered a wide range of subjects including the revised budget estimates announced in Washington yesterday forecasting a net deficit for this fiscal year of $895,000,000 (exclusive of debt retirement), which is $277,000,000 higher than last April's estimates.

Silent On Criticism.

The President's only comment on this was that the Government could have remained within the April expenditure estimates had Congress kept within budget recommendations.

He repeated what he said several times on his Western trip—that he expected definitely to attain a balanced budget in the 1938-39 fiscal period. He said he believed this could be done without increased taxation. Curtailed relief outlays will be one aim, he told a radio audience last night.

Asked if he believed the market break would affect the Government tax revenues, he said he did not know.

He had no comment on proposals to reduce or adjust the capital gains tax. Leading bankers have suggested this as one way to encourage business expansion.

Published criticisms of his foreign policy were greeted with silence by the Chief Executive. He said it was news to him that the Government was contemplating a large rearmament program, as a questioner said had been reported in Wall street.

There was nothing new on plans for the special session of Congress, he said. These will await his return to Washington tomorrow, where he probably will confer with Congressional leaders before coming back to Hyde Park.

Curb on Coughlin Appealed to Pope

Toledo, Ohio, Oct. 19 (AP).—Walter Baertschi, organizer for Father Coughlin's National Union for Social Justice, said today permission was sought through Pope Pius XI for the Royal Oak, Mich., priest to speak without ecclesiastical censorship.

"This action is being taken on my own initiative," Baertschi declared.

The radio priest canceled a scheduled radio series after Archbishop Edward Mooney of Detroit reproved him for stating in an interview that President Roosevelt showed "personal stupidity" in appointing Hugo Black to the Supreme Court.

Vatican City, Oct. 19 (AP).—An authoritative Vatican source said today the Vatican would not interfere between Father Charles E. Coughlin and his superior, Archbishop Edward Mooney, in the question of censoring the radio priest's broadcasts.

THOMAS E. LODGE.

By Christine Sadler.

Slender, agile minded Thomas Ellis Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, welcomes conventions to the city, dedicates bridges, tells Congressmen where they're cock-eyed about District affairs, and devotes just about as much time to civic questions as if he were the real mayor of Washington—instead of the nearest thing to it.

With 65 member associations and between 40,000 and 50,000 organized citizens behind him, he holds the city's highest elective office. Although its youngest president (38), he presides over the federation in an ironclad manner, and when he gets ready to sail into the "appointed" District government he has plenty of words handy.

"Humpty-dumpty, topsy-turvy, upside-down, unbusinesslike," are adjectives he uses to describe the method of arriving at District budget figures. "Inefficient and sound asleep," he said this summer in regard to the District of Columbia office of tax collector. He thinks the way taxes "are received rather than collected," and the difficulty citizens have in learning how much they owe, "completely antiquated and stupid."

Holds Vote "Probable."

Lodge is a hard-hitter in favor of national representation for the District, believes it "both probable and possible," and thinks he will live to see it. On the subject of municipal government he remains officially silent.

The present business tax he considers wholly unfair and inequitable. He would prefer either a sales or an income tax.

The next District budget, in his opinion, should not exceed that for the current year, but should be less—if at all possible.

While he realizes that in the District the government's power does not spring from the people, he thinks that the theory of democratic government should be followed here just as elsewhere in the United States and that on all matters of discretion "the will of the majority" should be consulted.

He advocates equitable fiscal relations between the United States and the District of Columbia, does not believe a $5,000,000 annual Federal contribution anything like approaches a "fair share."

Friends Call Him "Tom."

A cash basis of operation for the District and greater use of its 40-mile water front for recreational purposes are two more of his well-known civic desires.

Lodge—who calls himself Tom Lodge to his numerous radio audiences and is so known by most of his friends—is from Delaware. He came to Washington in 1917, when he was but 19. He was in the offices of Delaware Senators until 1923, when he was appointed assistant United States attorney for the District. In 1926 he resigned that job to enter private law practice.

In 1925 Lodge helped organize the American University Park Citizens Association and became its first president, serving five terms. This is his second term as president of the federation.

One of his lesser known activities is that of teaching. Four nights a week he goes to Columbus University to be a professor of law, likes it very much. He is considered an excellent professor. Although quick in manner, his legal mind makes him thorough and a searcher after all sides of a question.

Hobby Is Gardening.

Nothing of a hop-skip-and-jump flavor meets his approval, neither does he believe a man can tell his whole life history in two or three well-selected sentences—as newspapers often have expected him to do, he claims.

His passion for having all the evidence before him has made Lodge impatient with lawyers who tell only one side, especially if they are attorneys hired by the Government. A prosecuting attorney, if working in behalf of justice, should take account of every fact available, in his opinion. "Why should the State be interested in getting a sentence against an innocent man?" he asks.

Lodge is married; has two children, Thomas Ellis Lodge, jr., 10, and William Gardiner Smith Lodge, 5 and lives at 4900 Forty-seventh street northwest. He likes to garden and to shoot at targets, which he sets up in his back yard. He is an extensive gardener raising fruits, flowers and vegetables. Nothing pleases him more than to give away bushels of garden products. Almost every morning finds him working the asparagus, going after weeds or gathering some of his numerous crops.

Miller Asserts He Is Unbiased On New Deal

Robinson Successor Does Not Consider Election Slap to President.

By the Associated Press.

Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 19.—Slender, soft spoken Representative John E. Miller, who steps into the Senate seat of the late Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson, November 15, emphasized today he was unbiased and unpledged with respect to the Roosevelt program.

The 49-year-old Democrat who ran as an independent and won yesterday over Gov. Carl E. Bailey, regular party nominee and outright New Deal adherent, said: "I most certainly do not consider my election a slap at President Roosevelt."

Miller commented today in reply to an inquiry about his position on President Roosevelt's Supreme Court reorganization plan, "I do not believe in nullification of the Constitution by indirection."

He declined to elaborate. Previously he had said "the court reorganization will not likely arise in the immediate future."

Bailey Injected Court Issue.

His opponent in the special general election, Gov. Carl E. Bailey, brought the court issue into the campaign with a charge that Miller was among those who blocked the President's plan in the last session of Congress.

Miller himself made no direct reply to this charge.

Miller was third ranking member of the House Judiciary Committee when it refused to consider the court proposal until the Senate had acted upon it. His term expires January 1, 1943.

Associated Press returns today showed Miller with 61,528 votes, to 40,390 for Bailey, in 1,542 of 1,982 precincts.

Bailey had asserted a victory for the Congressman would be a "slap in the face for Franklin Delano Roosevelt." Bailey withheld comment on this angle today.

"New Deal Never Involved."

Miller said: "The New Deal was never involved in this campaign although my opponent attempted to make it an issue."

He said he believed his victory due to "the feeling of outrage on the part of Arkansas citizens" over Bailey's nomination by the Democratic State executive committee and the Governor's "refusal to join in the request for a Democratic primary."

Born in Stoddard County, Mo., he was educated in the rural schools there, at Bloomfield, Mo., Cape Girardeau Teachers College, Valparaiso (Ind.,) University and the University of Kentucky Law School.

He began practicing law at Searcy, Ark., in 1912, was elected prosecuting attorney and in 1930 was sent to Congress from the Second District. He was re-elected three times.

His wife is the former Ethel Lindsey, member of a prominent central Arkansas family. They have a son, John, jr., 14, and a daughter, Mary Louise, 17, student at Sullins College, Bristol, Va.

Ford Kansas City Plant Closed 'Permanently'

Detroit, Oct. 19 (AP).—H. C. Doss, manager of the recently closed Kansas City branch of the Ford Motor Co., said today all operations of that plant have been transferred to other branches, and "the company has no plans for opening additonal plants."

Levitt Reiterates Court Challenge

By the Associated Press.

Albert Levitt, former Assistant to the Attorney General, declared yesterday that President Roosevelt is determined to change this country's form of government, partly by "subordination and, if necessary, the destruction of the Supreme Court."

Levitt, who recently made an unsuccessful effort to unseat Associate Justice Hugo L. Black, expressed his views in a letter to Frank E. Gannett, New York publisher and chairman of the National Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government.

Gannett made public the letter and also a telegram of his own renewing a challenge to Robert H. Jackson, Assistant Attorney General, to debate with Levitt publicly on the question:

"Does President Roosevelt intend and plan to abolish the Supreme Court of the United States and to destroy the present constitutional powers and duties of its judges?"

Jackson, who has vigorously defended the President's side-tracked Supreme Court organization proposal, declined Gannett's original challenge issued October 12.

Firm to Ask Rehearing In 'Absence of Black'

Tampa, Fla., Oct. 19 (AP).—Frank L. Ryan and Ryan Florida Corporation announced today they would petition the United States Supreme Court for a rehearing "in the absence of Justice Black" as a result of an order denying appeal in their suit attacking the Securities and Exchange Commission attempt to subpena their telegrams.

The statement said, "petitioners, of course, reserve the right to decide later to include the grounds of general ineligibility of Justice Black if they are convinced the challenge contains merit."

U. S. Circuit Court Upholds Utilities In Fight on TVA

By the United Press.

New Orleans, Oct. 19.—The Fifth U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals today reversed the Northern Alabama District Court's decision restraining the Alabama Power Co. and 18 other utilities from proceeding against the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The circuit court stated that the companies already had started suit in Tennessee, and ruled that the Tennessee jurisdiction was under attack and, therefore, the Alabama District Court must not interfere in the utilities' suit against the New Deal power agency.

Paper of Gumwood Now Is Perfected

Savannah, Ga., Oct. 19 (AP).—Dr. Charles Herty announced today perfection of a process for manufacture of newsprint from the black gumwood tree found in Atlantic and Gulf Coast river swamps.

He described it as "the most important development from our laboratory since the day we made our commercial experimental run (with pine pulp) at Thorold, Canada, about four years ago."

To the South, he added, it means addition of "40 per cent more to the already vast resources for the manufacture of paper, particularly newsprint."

100 Million Work in Co-ops, Students Told

Jacob Baker Describes Enterprises at American University.

About 100,000,000 people throughout the world are engaged in co-operative agriculture, business or manufacture, Jacob Baker, senior member of the President's inquiry concerning co-operative enterprise and a member of the Co-operative League of the United States, told a class in the Graduate School of American University last night.

America still is pioneering in the co-operative field, Baker asserted. He said only about 1,000,000 Americans were occupied in co-operative projects.

Baker told of various co-operative enterprises in the United States and Europe, particularly in the Scandinavian countries. Much of America's co-operative work is in California and the Northwest, he added.

Principles of co-operative enterprises, as outlined by Baker, included open membership and ownership, irrespective of race, nationality, politics or religion; Democratic control with each member having one vote; limited returns on capital and return of gains to members; regular provision of funds for promotional and educational work; cash trading and trading at market prices.

Walter Lippmann Cruel, Wife Claims In Divorce Action

Bradenton, Fla., Oct. 19 (AP).—Charging extreme cruelty and a violent and ungovernable temper, Mrs. Faye Lippmann filed suit today for divorce from Walter Lippmann, author and newspaper columnist.

The Lippmanns were married in New York City, May 24, 1917, and lived together until August, 1937, the petition set forth.

Mrs. Lippmann asserted that on August 11 her husband left for an extended tour of Europe. At the pier, the petition recited, "her husband treated her with absolute coldness and told her he cared absolutely nothing for her." She also alleged he "absented himself from home for several days at a time without advising her of his whereabouts or plans."

The petition also declared the "defendant is a facile veteran in the use of invective."

The Lippmanns have no children. The petition said a property settlement in lieu of allmony is pending.

H. A. Gray Named Chief PWA Aide to Succeed Hackett

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, Oct. 19.—Howard A. Gray, of Illinois, was reported by President Roosevelt today to be assistant Administrator of the Public Works Administration.

Gray, who will succeed Horatio B. Hackett, also of Illinois, who has resigned, has been chief of the PWA housing division in Washington under Secretary Ickes, PWA administrator.

He had been mentioned for the new housing authority post under Ickes, but the President named Nathan Straus, of New York, to that job yesterday.

House Farm Group Called for Oct. 27

Amarillo, Tex., Oct. 19 (AP).—Representative Marvin Jones, of Amarillo, chairman of the House Committee on Agriculture, announced today he had called the committee to meet in Washington, October 27, to shape a new farm bill for early presentation to the special session of Congress President Roosevelt called to convene November 15.

Jones made the announcement shortly before leaving by train for Washington. He said the 25 members of the committee had conferred with the farmers in all parts of the Nation and that the new measure would be aimed at meeting the needs of all the agricultural sections.

Fire Ruins Where 6 Died Give Up 1; 5 Still Buried

Erie, Pa., Oct. 19 (AP).—Smoldering ruins covered tonight the bodies of five of six persons trapped in a flaming farmhouse near the town of Waterford, 18 miles south of Erie, early today.

One body was taken from the debris during the day when it fell to the ground with the crash of one of the fire-weakened walls of the house in which Mrs. Helen Molash, 52-year-old widowed mother, perished with her four children and a hired man, Harry Irchoff, 50.

Ancient Coins Washed Ashore Revive Tales of Pirate Hoard

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Rehoboth Beach, Del., Oct. 19—Stories of pirates and sunken ships were revived at this resort today when batches of ancient copper coins washed ashore following recent storms.

For many years Rehoboth Beach dwellers and frequent visitors to this beach have combed the shores following rains in hope of finding the coins.

Two theories exist as to the origin of the money.

Judge Edgar Goodrich, former member of the Board of Tax Appeals, residing in Washington, who has about 20 of the pieces, explains the two schools of thought on this subject.

"Some people say pirates placed the 'pieces of eight' under ground several miles off the shore at a time when the water did not cover the land," Goodrich relates.

6,000 Italian Troops Dispatched to Libya Reported in Spain

Gibralter, Oct. 19 (U.P.).—Six thousand Italian troops, arriving in daily contingents aboard merchant ships from the Canary Islands and from Melilla, Morocco, landed at Cadiz last week, it was reported reliably tonight.

It also was reported that most of the troops belonged to regiments recently dispatched from Italy ostensibly to the African colony of Libya.

$52,542,029 In Loans Paid By 33 Railroads

20 Others Still Owe Credit Corporation $21,149,339.

By the Associated Press.

The railroad credit corporation reported yesterday that 33 of 53 railroads to which it had extended $73,691,368 in loans since 1931 have retired their obligations.

These paid a total of $52,542,029, leaving an outstanding balance of $21,149,339, the corporation said.

Of 20 roads still obligated, it said 17 are now in the hands of courts.

Commenting on the latter loans, E. G. Buckland, president of the corporation, told stockholders at a meeting today that reorganization plans had been prepared by the several carriers involved.

Rock Island Gains.

By the Associated Press.

A railroad expert told the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday that the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway will be able to catch up with its deferred maintenance program within five years.

The expert, J. E. Slater, partner in the New York consulting engineer firm of Coverdale and Colpitts, said the program was in arrears by not more than $10,500,000, in contrast to much higher figures variously reported. Slater made a study of the road's condition for a protective committee holding general mortgage bonds.

State Bars Women On Jury as 'Monty' Is Placed on Trial

Elizabethtown, N. Y., Oct. 19 (AP).—The State rejected today the women whom Hollywood's golf wizard John Montague said he was "perfectly willing" to have serve on the jury to try him on a 7-year-old robbery charge.

Four women included on the original panel of 36 veniremen walked to the witness stand as opposing attorneys began selection of a jury, and stepped down unaccepted for service when Prosecutor Thomas W. McDonald commented after a brief examination:

"The prosecution challenges."

Later the district attorney told newspapermen:

"My only reason in rejecting women is the fact that we lack the proper facilities to accommodate them. The jury will be locked up nights."

FCC Member Out of Hearing On Disbarment

Commissioner George Henry Payne, of the Federal Communications Commission, late yesterday was disqualified from sitting in a disbarment hearing against Paul M. Segal and George S. Smith, radio attorneys, charged with unethical conduct.

Disqualification of Payne came after attorneys for Segal and Smith "suggested" at the opening of the hearing that the commissioner disqualify himself. While Payne refused to do this, he did not contest disqualification after a formal motion was filed.

In obtaining the disqualification of Payne, Lawrence Koenigsberger, of defense counsel, orally appealed to the full commission to disqualify Payne, contending the commissioner had "convicted" the respondents two weeks before the formal filing of charges against them, and had "undertaken to influence the public" against the two lawyers.

Sitting in the hearing were Chairman Frank R. McNinch and Commissioners Paul Walker, Norman case, Eugene Sykes and Thad Brown.

Accused of Concealing Facts.

The two attorneys will be given an impartial trial and the commission will "neither take nor accept any unfair advantage," Chairman McNinch said, as the hearing opened.

Both lawyers are accused of "alleged unbecoming and unprofessional conduct and demeanor for the alleged concealment in obtaining admission to practice before the commission of material facts."

They are alleged to have set up "dummy" corporations for the purpose of applying for new station permits. The FCC charged this procedure was intended to deceive it and to prevent other applicants from obtaining radio facilities.

First of the "dummy" charges was made by the FCC last May, and later two new "dummy" charges were filed.

In these Segal and Smith were alleged to have set up "dummy corporations," which were known as the Commercial Broadcasters, Inc., and the Great Western Broadcasting Association, Inc.

Sought Three Stations.

In the names of these corporations the lawyers are alleged to have filed application for new broadcasting stations at Moorhead, Minn., and Logan and Provo, Utah.

They also are accused of filing an application as counsel for Geraldine Alberghane when "they knew or should have known," the FCC asserted, "that said Geraldine Alberghane was not the true applicant and that she did not own the funds as represented and that she was a subterfuge, or 'dummy' applicant for another person or persons."

Italy Imposes New Taxes for Arms, Empire

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Oct. 19.—The Italian cabinet imposed new taxes today to meet the cost of developing the empire and participating in the international arms race.

It also sought to attract foreign capital into Italy by offering to exempt investors from inheritance taxes and guaranteeing that investments would not be expropriated in the event of war.

Another important action was the issuance of an order to organize a Fascist militia in East Africa, bringing resident Italians into the new legions so as to give "everyone a chance to do his Fascist duty."

The total revenue intended to be raised by the new taxes was not officially announced, but authoritative sources estimated 6,000,000,000 lira (approximately $315,600,000) would be realized within a year.

Chief among the new taxes was an extraordinary assessment of 10 per cent on capital of stock companies which the government asserted had for the most part profited through devaluation of the lira and had not been subject to such heavy levies as others. This levy will be imposed only this year.

Other new levies included increased taxes on production, business transactions, sales and legal paper. The daily sojourn tax on tourists also will be increased. Increases in this group were expected to yield about 1,000,000,000 lira (approximately $52,600,000) annually.

Virginio Gayda, explaining the new taxes in the official newspaper, Il Giornale d'Italia, said the capital tax, plus 1,000,000,000 lira to be raised annually through the other levies, would insure a balanced budget for two years.

A communique issued after the cabinet meeting explained that since Italy began the Ethiopian campaign holders of government bonds and landlords had paid large amounts through special levies, and that the capital tax would apply equivalent taxation on holders of stock.

Kidnaped Priest Freed By Manchukuan Bandits

Los Angeles, Oct. 19 (AP).—Father Gerald A. Donovan, reported kidnaped October 6 from the Fushian Mission in Manchukuo by bandits, has been rescued, Father Hugh Lavery, of the Maryknoll Mission, here said he had been informed by cablegram today. The bandits had demanded $50,000. He was reported unharmed.

Beer Spilled on Baltimore Highway

Beer was scattered far and wide yesterday afternoon when the driver of this truck lost control on Dead Man's Curve near Elkridge, Md. The vehicle swerved into a boggy field and knocked down a pole. The trailer slipped from the truck and rolled over but no one was hurt. Damage was estimated at $1,200.

Shells Slew Fugitives From Junk, Owner Says

Hongkong, Oct. 19 (AP).—A Chinese junk owner testified before British investigators today that a submarine attacked persons who fled from his craft under shellfire in South China waters.

He said when the submarine appeared he and the other 31 persons on his boat, including women and children, tried to escape. Shells killed two women, he said.

When the craft went down, the Chinese continued, 17 of the occupants took to a raft and 12 rowed away in a dinghy. He said the submarine machine-gunned the dinghy, killing nine persons, including his two sons, his daughter-in-law and several young grandchildren.

$50,000 Selassie Suit Hinges on His Status

London, Oct. 19 (AP).—Haile Selassie's $50,000 suit against Cable and Wireless Company was adjourned indefinitely today, pending efforts by counsel to obtain foreign office clarification of what Britain now regards as the government of Ethiopia.

The Negus contends the money is due him under an agreement for wireless service to London the day he fled Addis Ababa in 1936, and that Britain still recognizes him as Emperor of Ethiopia, thereby establishing his legal right to claim the money.

Japanese Party Assails American Labor Unions

Tokyo, Oct. 19 (AP).—The Japanese social mass party today accused American and Canadian labor unions of "protecting the interests of capitalists and abandoning the rights of the working classes" because they favor anti-Japanese boycotts.

The party sent manifestos to the American Federation of Labor, the Committee for Industrial Organization and the All-Canada Labor Union.

Rebels Hurdle Last Obstacle In Gijon Drive

Fall of Villaviciosa Leaves Way to Key City Undefended.

By the United Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Oct. 19.—Gen. Gonzalo Queipo de Llano announced late tonight that Villaviciosa, last stand of the Asturian defense of Gijon, had fallen to his rebel army.

Villaviciosa, only 11 miles from the besieged Asturian seaport on the Biscay coast, opens up a broad and unprotected highway for the rebel advance.

English Ship Sunk.

Valencia, Spain, Oct. 19 (AP).—The war ministry tonight announced that the English vessel Reina had been sunk at El Musel on the north Spanish coast in territorial waters as the insurgents by land and air closed a ring around Gijon, last government stronghold in the north.

8,000 Moors Repelled.

Madrid, Oct. 19 (AP).—Spanish government troops reported tonight they had hurled back an insurgent thrust by 8,000 Moors on the southern front near Toledo, killing 600 and wounding many.

Madrid police arrested 44 persons as fascists in what was termed a new conspiracy to overthrow the government. The international brigade reported that the brother of Angelo Herndon, colored American radical, had lost his life in the recent heavy fighting on the Aragon front.

Rail Bombing Fails.

French Ship Released.

Paris, Oct. 19 (AP).—The navy ministry announced today Spanish insurgents had released the French freighter Cens "upon intervention of French destroyers."

Fascists Seize Islands.

Paris (Wednesday), Oct. 20 (U.P.).—Genevieve Tabouis, foreign editor of L'Oeuvre, said today Italian troops seized the Columbrete Islands, south of the Spanish Balearics in the Mediterranean, and established a submarine base there.

France to Send 80 Airplanes To North Africa in Maneuvers

Flight Plans Coincide With Report Charging Italian Agitation Among Moslems and Appointment of 'Dictator' for Colony.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Oct. 15.—France today decided to dispatch more than 80 first line planes to North Africa—the greatest air force ever sent a French colony—for fall maneuvers demonstrating her air power to the empire.

The air ministry announcement of the overseas flight coincided with the council of ministers' decision making former Premier Albert Sarraut virtual dictator of North African administration and a Radical Socialist Party report charging Italian agitation among the Moslems.

Sarraut was instructed to present a survey of the colonial situation to the council soon and outline control measures he intends to take.

The air ministry said squadrons of the First Air Corps will leave southern France October 27 and November 9, while the Second Air Corps will leave October 28 for France's first major air maneuvers in her African possessions.

Many of the formations will unite November 11 for an Armistice Day aerial parade over Tunis.

The Radical-Socialist report of Italian agitation among Moslems was made by Jacques Kayser, leader of the powerful party, who said: "Italy recruits agents and pays propagandists among natives, subsidizes Moslem pilgrimages to Mecca and uses her radio stations to broadcast anti-French and anti-British propaganda in Arabic."

'Death Tourist,' 18, Is Sent to Insane Hospital in Maine

Portland, Me., Oct. 19 (AP).—Cumberland County authorities, in a surprise move, today whisked Paul N. Dwyer, 18-year-old South Paris "death tourist," to the State Insane Hospital at Augusta for observation.

Arraignment here on a charge of strangling Mrs. Lydia Littlefield, 67, of South Paris, at New Gloucester last Friday was postponed. Defense Counsel E. Walker Abbot said insanity would be the youth's defense.

WINTER OIL-PLATING

Never yet has any mere free-flowing oil ever lubricated any cold engine instantly!

Never instantly. Never by simply flowing freely.

Too much tiny oil-tubing and a thousand other tiny spaces to wriggle through.

But today one free-flowing oil gets clear around that. IT OIL-PLATES YOUR ENGINE.

Why? . . . Because Germ Processed oil never lazily waits to flow on to moving parts, but PLATES ON and STAYS ON.

OIL-PLATING cannot drain down "between times." Standing idle a whole Winter week, your engine still stays OIL-PLATED clear to the top. Before usual oils can even wake up, OIL-PLATING has prepared a well-oiled getaway.

It's like needing no warm-up. And you won't overwork your battery . . . or use up near as much oil. Make this great change to Germ Processed today, at your Conoco Mileage Merchant's.

Rumors of War Are Only Talk, Duperrey Says

France Should Have Paid War Debt, World Rotary Head Declares.

In flawless English, the broad shouldered, 59-year-old Frenchman, Maurice Duperrey, president of Rotary International, brought to Washington yesterday encouragement for world peace, an expression that his homeland should have resumed payments on her debt "long ago" and a prescription for the office he holds.

Of world peace he said:

"There may be conversation across the European and Asiatic continents about war, but it is so much talk. How you say it?—'barking dogs never bite'—holds true for these nations. The last world conflict broke like a thunderstorm, without warning."

Of the debts:

"I think France should have resumed payments on her debt to this country long ago, but I don't think she can do it now. Our manufacturers are still paying wages based on the old 48-hour week for 40 hours of work and we find the competition difficult."

"A Strong Stomach."

For holding the office of international president of a luncheon club with units in 82 countries, the chief qualification:

"A strong stomach."

M. Duperrey received a delegation of newspaper men in the home of his host, George B. Harris, 3107 Woodland drive. Owner of three French chemical factories, he was elevated to his office at the 1936 international convention at Nice in the presence of Premier LeBrun. He came to the Capital to join the Washington club in the celebration of its twenty-fifth anniversary.

He speaks as perfectly as English the language of four more nations—Germany, Italy, Portugal and Spain—and Esperantoc. "To think seriously about any nation, one must think in the native tongue."

For the last two months he has toured with his wife the South American republics. "It was necessary for me to visit the sister American nations, as no other president has ever been there," he said.

Every South American republic has a Rotary Club, he said, and the feeling there is very strong for further advancement in understanding between the Americas.

He expressed the hope that Germany, where Hitler's anti-Semetic and anti-Masonic decrees forced German Rotary to disband, would soon "understand Rotary better. We refuse to be anti anything. Oftimes we have been accused of being connected with Freemasonry, but this is not true. We have no restrictions of creed. I have my friends in Germany."

Deep Wounds in Spain.

"What can we do in Spain? We can't take sides. That is, you might say, an international civil war. In France we have helped refugees if they are red or white. Rotary's problem in Spain, when the war is over, as I hope it will be soon, will be to help reconcile the factions. Unlike other wars when the invading nations withdraw after peace is signed, they'll have to go on living together, and there will be deep wounds to heal."

Personally, M. Duperrey said, he sides with China in the conflict with Japan, but Rotary cannot place the blame, but must work through its members for ultimate peace.

Awarded the War Cross, British Military Medal, Duperrey, has also been honored by Mussolini, who bestowed upon him the title of Commander of the Italian Crown. He is president of the Committee of International Affairs of France and honorary secretary of the Council of Foreign Trades in Paris.

Honored at Embassy.

M. and Mme. Duperrey were entertained at a luncheon yesterday at the French Embassy. Later in the day, he was greeted by Rotarians at a reception in the home of R. B. Swope, president of the Rotary Club of Washington.

This afternoon he speaks on "Rotary as a Vehicle," at Memorial Continental Hall. Other speakers include Rotarian Harrison E. Howe, Secretary of Commerce Roper, Dr. George F. Zook, president of the American Council on Education, and Dr. Thomas A. Healy, dean, foreign service school, Georgetown University.

At the Silver Anniversary dinner tonight, M. Duperrey will appear as the only speaker. The affair will be at the Mayflower Hotel. A visit to the White House has been planned for today.

Army Orders Propellers.

Secretary of War Woodring announced yesterday that a contract for propellers and spare propeller parts, valued at $378,000, has been awarded to the Hamilton Standard Propellers Division, United Aircraft Corp.

Episcopal Session Opposes Reformed Communion Plan

House of Bishops Kills Intinction Proposal After Approval by Deputies; D. C. Physician Calls Present System 'Unsanitary.'

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Oct. 19.—The fifty-second triennial general convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church ended today, its closing hours marked by debate over a proposal to change the method of administering Holy Communion.

The House of Deputies voted a revision in the prayer book which would permit the use of intinction, but the House of Bishops refused to concur, thus killing the legislation.

Communicants, by intinction, merely dip the wafer, representing the flesh of Christ, into the communion cup containg wine, representing the holy blood, and then consume the bread. The general practice is to consume the wafer and then drink from the one cup which serves the whole congregation.

Proponents of the change contended the old method was insanitary.

In a comparison of the communion cup with the common drinking cup, which he said had been outlawed throughout the country, Dr. W. S. Bowen, Washington physician, declared:

"The minister who administers the communion cup may become liable for damages in the case of any disease contracted or when mental anguish and fear result from a known exposure."

Opponents of intinction asserted it was contrary to the teaching of Christ.

The convention, which began October 6, was hailed by church leaders as one of the most enthusiastic, successful and harmonious in the church's history.

Perhaps its outstanding accomplishment was the delegation of broader powers to the presiding bishop.

In its closing minutes the convention voted to continue the forward movement commission, set up to reinvigorate the religious life of the church.

A committee on marriage and divorce was appointed by the women's auxiliary and will confer with a general convention committee on the same subject.

The convention, in its triennial pastoral letter to the Episcopal clergy and laity throughout the world, asserted "the church must not sit quietly by when the world faces acute social and economic problems," but should "find jobs for the jobless, carry hope to the hopeless, assure relief to the oppressed."

Among deputies appointed to the forward movement commission were the Rev. Alexander Zabriskie, of Alexandria, Va., and Coleman Jennings, of Washington.

Clew to Continent Swamped by Ocean Found in Fiji Isles

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—A clew to a lost world in the Pacific Ocean was announced here today by the Fahnestock South Seas expedition of the American Museum of Natural History.

The clew is swastika-like symbols, some as big as windows, carved 4 inches deep in the face of a 40-ton monolith apparently hewn by human hands from an immense boulder. It was discovered in the Fiji Islands.

The monolith fills in an archeological trail running half across the Pacific Ocean from Malaya toward the Panama Canal, which points to two possibilities: A civilization which has disappeared, or a sunken continent, usually called Mu, that once might have filled that part of the ocean.

Vote Is 918 to 685; Dispute Led to Criticism of NLRB.

By the Associated Press.

The American Federation of Labor won a long battle with the C. I. O. yesterday at the National Electric Products Corporation's Ambridge, Pa., plant.

The Labor Relations Board certified the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, an A. F. of L. union, as sole collective bargaining agent for the plant's production workers.

The United Electrical and Radio Workers, affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization, contended it represented a majority of the employes. It lost a Labor Board election to the employes. It lost a Labor Board election to the I. B. E. W., 918 to 685.

The case attained Nation-wide prominence when the Labor Board ordered the election at the C. I. O.'s request after a Federal court at Pittsburgh directed the company to comply with a closed shop contract it had made with the A. F. of L. union.

Meeting at Atlantic City, N. J., at the time, the A. F. of L. executive council accused the board of partiality to the C. I. O., and talked of amending the Wagner labor disputes act to prevent the board from stepping into interunion disputes.

The C. I. O. criticized the board for what it said was partiality to the A. F. of L.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Analyzing the Opening Hand

Declarer can often make highly significant deductions from the opening lead. This, of course, assuming that the lead has been selected with some thought—not merely tossed out at random. I realize the ironical implication of my statement and freely admit that the player who carefully considers his leads and plays may be giving more information to the enemy than if he were to close his eyes and pull a card. There are isolated instances where the most ridiculous plays work out beautifully, but it hardly follows that this will be the rule.

In today's hand, declarer knew that the opening leader was not a hit-or-miss player and, therefore, was able to draw a valuable deduction.

North, dealer.

	♠ Q 8 7 5 3 2 ♡ Q J ◇ J 9 3 7 ♣ 10
♠ A J 6 ♡ K 9 7 4 ◇ 6 4 ♣ K 9 5 3	North West East South	♠ K 10 4 ♡ A 8 5 3 2 ◇ — ♣ 9 7 6 4 2
	♠ 9 ♡ 10 6 ◇ A K Q 10 5 3 2 ♣ A Q J

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
Pass	Pass

Since North had passed originally South felt that a slam was remote and that, since he could defend against neither major suit, a preemptive bid was the best course.

West, as may be seen from a study of his hand alone, was rather on the spot for a good opening lead. To lead from the A-J-6 of spades was certainly not attractive, nor was he much inclined to lead away from one of his Kings. He felt that either hearts of clubs would be the right lead but, with that pessimism that I for one find quite understandable, feared that he would choose the wrong one. Rather than run that risk he decided on the waiting lead of a trump.

When the dummy went down declarer saw that the trump opening had given him a temporary reprieve from defeat since, of course, he saw that he was off two hearts and one spade in top cards. East signaled with a high heart on the first trick and, with the lead resting in dummy, declarer considered the one point that would determine the fulfillment or loss of his contract. Obviously, he could get rid of one of dummy's hearts by guessing the position of the club King. If East had that card, declarer could finesse against it and then cash the Ace, to discard a heart from dummy. If West had the club King, the play would be to lead the ten to the Ace and send the Queen through West, discarding a heart if he failed to cover, or ruffing if he did cover, and then returning with a trump, to discard on the established Jack.

Mathematically, it was exactly 50-50, but fortunately for the declarer the problem was not purely a mathematical one. West had opened a trump, which was the strongest sort of indication that he feared leading from other suits. What was more likely than that he had held the heart and club Kings, possibly with the spade King as well, or some sort of combination in spades that he dared not touch? On this sound reasoning declarer determined to play West for the club King, and the game became a laydown.

Vernon E. West Explains Advantages and Faults of Proposal.

Following is the fourth in a series of articles on proposed local taxes by members of the District tax committee. The sales tax, which he discusses, was the committee's choice last spring.

By Vernon E. West,
Principal Assistant Corporation Counsel.

When, during the last session of Congress, the Commissioners of the District were confronted with the problem of proposing additional means to raise the revenue necessary for balancing the budget of the District, they recommended to Congress that a part of the money required should be obtained through the imposition of a retail sales tax. Under the bill approved by the Commissioners and submitted to the House District Committee a 2 per cent tax was to be levied upon the gross receipts of retailers from the sale of tangible personel property. The term "tangible personal property" was defined as meaning personal property which may be seen, weighed, measured, felt, touched or is in any other manner perceptible to the senses, including sales of admission to any place of amusement. However, there was exempted, from the imposition of tax proposed, gross receipts from the sale of food products for human consumption, but not including within the exemption intoxicating liquors or soft drinks, or the furnishing, preparing or serving for a consideration of any food consumed on the premises of the person furnishing, preparing or serving the same.

This recommendation of the Commissioners was rejected by the House District Committee and the revenue bill as it passed the House did not contain the sales tax feature. The Senate District Committee, however, reinstated the sales tax provisions substantially as recommended by the Commissioners except that the exemptions were enlarged to include the sale of medicines, wearing apparel for any part of the body and motor vehicle fuels. This tax, however, was stricken from the bill on the floor of the Senate.

A sales tax possesses certain advantages over other forms of taxation, although it must be recognized that there are several objections thereto. The Commissioners were led to recommend it to Congress primarily for three reasons: First, the District was required to raise a specific amount of money to meet a deficit and the revenue to be derived from the sales tax could be computed with a fair degree of accuracy through the use of statistics compiled by the Department of Commerce and the Bureau of the Census. Secondly, the tax to a large extent could be collected by the retailers from the consumers before becoming due to the District, thus working no great hardship upon the retailers. Thirdly, the collection of this tax from the consumers is a near painless as any tax that has ben devised. The total amount of the tax due from an individual in any given year is not taken from him in a lump sum or in semiannual installments, as is the case with respect to real estate and personal property taxes. It is spread over the whole year and paid in small amounts as he is able to buy and as a part of the price of the article purchased, as in the case of taxes upon gasoline. Another advantage of this form of taxation is that, generally speaking, it is paid by consumers in proportion to their purchasing power, those whose purchases are in the larger amounts paying a larger tax than those whose purchases are limited.

On the other hand, objection is made to this form of taxation, if levied without exemptions, on the ground that the poor are taxed upon the necessities of life. This objection is easily remedied in theory by exempting from the operation of the tax, as was done by the Senate District Committee, sales of food, clothing and medicine, but such exemptions raise a practical difficulty in the collection of the tax. Where a merchant is engaged in the business of selling both exempt and non-exempt commodities the administrative difficulty of auditing his books to determine the portion of his gross receipts upon which the tax is due becomes apparent.

Another objection to this tax is the difficulty the retailer has in collecting the tax from the consumer upon small sales. For example, upon the sale of a soft drink for 5 cents the tax would be but a fraction of a cent and there is no coin representing the amount of the tax. If the retailer adds the amount of the smallest coin—one cent—to his price he is collecting from his customers amounts far in excess of the tax he, the retailer, will be required to pay. The tax upon these small sales can only be imposed equitably by the use of stamps or tokens representing the fractional part of a cent, but the use of these in States imposing a sales tax has been regarded by the consuming public as a nuisance.

It will thus be seen that the question whether a sales tax should be provided for the District is a highly controversial one, and it is for the people of the District and the Congress to determine whether the advantages of such a method of taxation outweigh its disadvantages.

That Sinful Apple

The Interior Department Recreation Association wants it known that the Big Apple, that skippy dance, is taboo at all I. D. R. A. functions. This statement of moral policy will appear in the October 25 issue of the I. D. R. A. News, affording sufficient warning to all big applers who intend going to the association's Halloween frolic on Friday night, October 29.

The News will say: "The association refuses to publicize its social affairs among other employes of the department by announcing any such incongruous attraction (?) as the palpably manufactured night-club monstrosity, the Big Apple, seems to be.

"Good, clean fun is one thing, but an exhibition of deportment so closely related to habitues of the honky-tonks has no place in polite society. The Big Apple is simply a catch phrase, a lure to the gullible.

"Pleasant surroundings, an atmosphere of congeniality and respectability, excellent music and association with those of mutual endeavors and aspirations is felt sufficient to offer as the basis of relaxation and terpsichorean allure.

"As remarked before, the Big Apple is a sour affair—a frost-bitten cull that should be tossed out the window. We will speak no more on the subject."

Such is the dictum of the association, as voiced through Editor Samuel M. Barrett. Now Samuel, certain thoughts occur in this connection and it is easy to think that you might find yourself in such a controversy, if not situation, that won't be easy to dance out of.

To begin with, we hear that the Big Apple originated in South Carolina, Editor Barrett's native heath. It seems that in that lush land where the woodbine twineth and the children are reared to vote the Democratic ticket, a group of young people went to a night club known as the Big Apple. And from their gyrations on the dance floor this new step—now called sinful by a native son—emerged, to move the feet of millions and the conscience of the I. D. R. A.

No one should know better than Editor Barrett that South Carolinians are spirited people; they have pride in what is theirs and protect it with a Palmetto flag. Now, with what sort of grace can the editor return to his native heather after defaming a contribution the State gave to the world? Doesn't he remember the lesson of Gen. Longstreet, another South Carolinian, who doesn't have many, if any, monuments down there because he turned from the Democratic Party.

The State didn't originate the Democratic Party, but it did originate the Big Apple, and in consequence might feel even more severe toward Editor Barrett than it did towar- Gen. Longstreet. But, undoubtedly, the editor considered all this before making his moral resolve. And is ready to take his stand on any dance issue that comes from Carolina, whether it emerges in the form of a Sumpter Shuffle, a Beauregard Backstep or a Columbia Clasp.

Letter Dept.

This letter, which someone can answer if he chooses, was in our mail box yesterday afternoon:

"I see they are still playing favorites in the Government departments. Certain women employes are retained because of outside influence or they stand in with their bosses. Some were taken on during the bonus rush temporarily, at Loan and Currency. When this was through they were transferred to the office at Second and D streets northeast, then to Internal Revenue, then to Second and D streets, and there most of them were dismissed.

"An employe was furloughed there, but her boss took her to the Bureau of Engraving and obtained work for her there, where she is still employed. Recently there was a lay-off, but she still retains her position. Is this fair to the other employes who were dismissed and who do not have husbands with permanent jobs to support them?

"If this happens in one Government department it must in others. It would be good for the Treasury Department to economize and set an example for the other departments. I thought the emergency was over. I wrote to your column last winter, stating that the women at the Internal Revenue were killing time and did not have work enough to keep them going. The next day, after the letter was published, the boss gave them extra work they had never done before and sent extra women in to help them. These were the temporary employes. He was afraid someone would come to investigate. The column then asked them to contradict my accusations, but did they do it? They could not.

"It is just the unfairness to those who were dismissed who had no one speaking for them to carry them on."

3-Judge Court Named for Test Of Privilege Tax

Levy Held Unfair Burden; Intangible Property Act Repeal Urged.

A three-judge court was appointed yesterday by Acting Chief Justice Charles H. Robb, of the United States Court of Appeals, to conduct additional hearings on the validity of the District's business privilege and gross receipts tax. The three-judge court was made necessary by a recent act of Congress that provided for the sitting of three justices in instances where the constitutionality of acts of Congress was questioned.

The situation was brought about when Howard W. Berry, advertising executive, sought to obtain an injunction against the collection of the tax on the grounds it was really an interstate tax and was not applicable to the private revenues of the District.

He contended the tax, which calls for a payment of $10 and two-fifths of 1 per cent of the gross income, was a burden on interstate commerce and was not constitutional because it did not follow the precept that all tax laws shall be uniform.

A prior hearing was held before Justice Jennings Bailey last week. Though arguments were heard, he certified the case to Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, who in turn certified it to the Appellate Court. Justice Robb named Justice D. Lawrence Groner, of the Appellate Court, and Justice Jennings Bailey and Chief Justice Wheat to the three-judge tribunal. No date was set for the hearing.

The tax is expected to yield revenues of $3,000,000 a year.

If there is to be any revision of the District's tax program, Engineer Commissioner Dan I. Sultan said yesterday he would advocate repeal of the "vicious" tax on intangible personal property.

His announcement supported contentions that the intangible levy penalizes honest taxpayers who report all holdings, but leaves a loophole for evasion on the part of those who are less conscientious.

Although refusing to commit himself on other phases of the tax structure, Sultan indicated he would side with Commissioner Allen on the question of a proposed income tax.

Should such a tax be imposed, said Sultan, those who are wage earners here, but who pay income levies "back home" should be exempted. Commissioner Hazen believes there should be no exemptions.

The Commissioners have agreed that there should be extensive revision of the business privilege levy if it is to be extended beyond the one-year limit.

Another Budget Revision.

The President has erred so consistently on the side of optimism in issuing his budgetary prophecies that public disappointment over failure to realize his expectations has become dulled. It was apparent some time ago that the 1938 budgetary picture was less rosy than originally painted.

However, if we could be reasonably sure that Congress would reform its spending habits and refrain from voting unbudgeted expenditures, the upward revision of the deficit would not be disturbing. Compared with the showing for the last fiscal year, indeed, the prograss toward a balanced budget is definitely encouraging.

The chief ground for anxiety is the failure to bring expenditures within reasonable limits, in spite of the heavy reductions in relief outlays during the current fiscal year. Even after allowing for a sharp decrease in estimated receipts, total revenues are expected to be nearly $1,400,000,000 above the returns for 1937. The failure to achieve a balance between income and outgo under such favorable conditions gives added point to the implied rebuke Mr. Roosevelt administered to Congress in listing various legislative appropriations for which no provision had been made in his April estimates.

That the President is prepared to resist continuance of emergency spending is shown by his emphasis upon the need for cutting Federal relief outlays and the steps taken to halt further advances by the PWA and the RFC. In his radio appeal for Community Chest funds he explained that the Federal Government must "more and more narrow the circle of relief activities" to bring expenditures within existing tax receipts.

With the prospect that the "welcome light of returning prosperity" may be less dazzling in the immediate future than the President has assumed, the possibility of higher taxes is especially disturbing. So is the thought of a ninth year of deficit financing. The only reasonable alternative is a determined cutting of expenditures.

The financing of a deficit is made easy—fortunately or unfortunately as one looks at it—by contributions to Government old age and State unemployment insurance funds. These are being invested in Government obligations with the result that during the current year the outstanding debt held by the public is expected to be reduced by $350,000,000, even with a $695,000,000 deficit in prospect.

This situation is calculated to encourage Congressional extravagance and to conceal from the public the seriousness of the mounting burden of debt.

The President's budget message is commendably frank in pointing out that receipts from pay-roll taxes have become a resource with which to finance deficits and actually retire debt in the hands of the public. The dangerous potentialities inherent in this system of easy financing cannot be impressed upon the public too strongly or too often.

A New Threat To Peace.

With a unanimity characteristic of the press of totalitarian states the newspapers of Germany have suddenly launched a violent campaign of abuse and denunciation against Czechoslovakia.

Such a government-inspired press attack on a neighboring and friendly land would be ominous at any time. It is particularly so with the international situation being what it is. It creates the impression that the long-threatened German assault on the Czechoslovak republic, the last democratic stronghold in central Europe, may soon be on the way.

The immediate occasion for this outcry was a relatively minor disturbance on the return from London of Konrad Henlein, leader of the pro-Nazi German element in Czechoslovakia. A demonstration planned by Henlein's followers was apparently suppressed by the police and in the ensuing scuffle several individuals were hurt.

No sooner was this event reported in Germany than the press, as with one voice, denounced it as a "barbarous provocation" and one which Germany "does not propose to tolerate." One would imagine from these and similar remarks that Czechoslovakia is but a province of the Third Reich, responsible to Berlin for the conduct of its purely internal affairs.

The effrontery of this Nazi attitude creates a suspicion that the Hitler government feels the moment opportune for a showdown with its small and weak neighbor. Russia, Czechoslovakia's powerful eastern ally, is preoccupied in the Far East; France, its western ally, is faced with a critical situation arising out of the Spanish civil war; Great Britain, as revealed by its latest retreat in the face of Italian pressure, is hardly in the mood to mix up in any central European brawl.

On the other hand, Germany is in a position to trade off support of Italy at London for Italian acquiescence in any Nazi campaign against Czechoslovakia. And Belgium's neutrality has been assured by the German pledge to respect the inviolability of Belgium territory.

The moment certainly would seem to be ripe for such a display of the mailed fist as might compel the Prague government to submit to Nazi demands. It may be that the Third Reich will not go beyond threats. Nonetheless, the present vitriolic press campaign against Czechoslovakia is certain to increase already grave tensions in Europe.

The Stock Market Collapse.

Debate over the causes of the stock market collapse reveals wide differences of opinion concerning the extent to which the selling movement was launched by fear of a business recession. It is, however, quite certain that when the break in the market started last August, business indices gave no hint of serious trouble ahead. On the contrary, the business figures were, as Winthrop W. Aldrich recently pointed out, extraordinarily good. Even in September there was only a limited recession, although there was growing anxiety about the outlook for sustained recovery as unfilled orders declined and new orders failed to meet expectations.

However, buyers and sellers of securities are primarily interested in the future of business rather than in its past, as reflected in available indices of activity. For that reason business statistics are a very unreliable guide to developments in the organized speculative markets, which are oversensitive to the influence of things yet to come.

Stock market movements, for instance, often reflect fears of business recession before there is any tangible evidence of its existence. Such fears have been gaining in strength for some time. There are fears that rising prices caused by higher production costs may arrest recovery; fears bred of political uncertainties at home and abroad, and ever-present anxiety concerning the possibility of new legislative experiments.

While these intangible factors help to explain why a selling wave began, they do not afford an explanation of the severity of the drop which has culminated in a real market panic. It would be futile to try to decide just how far the lack of buying support on the decline is due to the system of regulation now in force and how far it is a consequence of governmental policies. But there is no question that the inability of the machinery of the stock exchanges to function freely has greatly exaggerated declines originating from other causes.

The system of regulation can be liberalized with a view to encouraging more active trading without sacrificing its beneficial effects. Such legislative changes, however, will not cure the nervousness engendered, by excessive legislative experimentation, chronic deficits and repeated demonstration of the Administration's unfriendly attitude toward so-called big business and speculative interests. It will not create buying support capable of "cushioning" market declines if taxes are so heavy as to prevent capital accumulation and destroy the incentive to salutary risk-taking in pursuit of profit.

A panic in Wall Street does not necessarily herald the oncoming of a major business depression, although it would be a great mistake to underrate the effect of a stock market collapse upon business sentiment. Even if it is due to exaggerated fear, it immediately reduces buying demands and prevents the flotation of new capital issues. The results are curtailment of retail trade and declines in the production of durable capital goods.

Whatever views the Administration may hold as to the causes of the stock market collapse, therefore, it cannot be blind to the importance of allaying the unrest and genuine anxiety of financial groups that play so large a part in bringing about recovery.

Equivocal Mr. Quezon.

The plea for Philippine independence by 1939 which Manuel Quezon has just addressed to the National Assembly is strangely obscure. It suggests that the President of the Philippines Commonwealth, far from being convinced of the virtues and advantages of a speedy dissolution of the ties binding the islands to the United States, is really interested in arousing doubts in Philippine minds as to the wisdom of such a course now or in the future. Said he:

> If we want independence at any cost and are ready to take all the consequences—the dangers as well as the advantages of independence—let us have it not later than 1939. If, however, we are fearful of the possible threats that complete independence may offer to our national security and we would rather remain under the protecting wing of the United States, then let us leave the final determination of our future to coming generations and not deceive ourselves with the groundless hope that by 1946 every danger will have vanished.

Where the commonwealth's chief executive himself stands on this question is indirectly revealed by his insistence that the present trade relations between the islands and the United States be continued for at least until 1949.

Such an arrangement, however, as President Quezon knows, would keep the Philippines economically dependent on the United States. He is no doubt also aware that it would be fought by the same interests in this country that were responsible for the passage of the Tydings-McDuffie act in the first place.

There was a time, and not so very long ago, when independence for the Philippines was the indispensable plank in the platform of every Filipino politician. But at closer view its desirability now appears to them very much open to question. Is Mr. Quezon launching his latest independence campaign with the view of undoing the very propaganda for which he and other Filipino leaders were responsible? Having released the genii of independence, it is by no means certain that he can put it back into the bottle again.

Mr. Straus' Opportunity.

As administrator of the United States Housing Authority, Nathan Straus has a rare opportunity to render a national service. He becomes a pioneer in a field that is of the utmost importance to a vast number of people especially in need of Government aid. Congress has left him a wide margin of discretion. The future of public housing in the United States will be vitally affected by the policies he initiates.

Fortunately, Mr. Straus has had a good deal of experience in the planning of low-cost housing projects. For a number of years he has been a student of housing as well as an active crusader in the movement against city slums. He recognizes the mistakes of previous efforts to cope with this problem, and is said to be fully in sympathy with the aims of the present slum clearance act.

Under the most favorable circumstances, however, the development of a sound public housing program will be an extremely complicated task. Congress has provided only the bare outlines of the policies to be followed. Moreover, the law as it was finally passed turned inside out the plans of some groups that are more interested in providing new housing than in genuine slum reclamation. Congress left no doubt that its chief interest was in the replacement of hovels that breed crime and disease by modest dwellings that can be rented to the lowest-income families without imposing too great a burden upon taxpayers.

That sort of program will require painstaking efforts. Its development is likely to be slow. Many States, for example, lack the legislation necessary to permit co-operation of their cities with the Housing Authority. Some of them are manifesting little interest in passing such laws. Yet the program must be developed on the basis of municipal control.

Slum clearance, moreover, is a tedious operation. It may be necessary to condemn land. Demolition of obsolete houses takes time. And if projects are to be properly coordinated with the general planning of cities, careful preliminary studies will be essential. The authority could undoubtedly make a better showing in its first few years if it could forget the slums and simply construct new dwellings on vacant land. But any such short cut would ignore the chief purpose of the new housing act.

Obviously, then, the first task of Mr. Straus will be the establishment of machinery through which this attack upon the slums can operate on a long-time basis. The development of a practical technique for Federal-municipal co-operation toward this end may be more important than any project launched in the next few years.

In a recent address before the New York Building Congress John W. Laing, practical builder and housing authority of London, pointed out the two most serious mistakes in what is generally regarded as a very successful British public building program. At first, he said, England's subsidized houses were built too expensively. And no definite line was drawn between the income group to be housed with public assistance and the much larger group that would have to rely upon private enterprise. Uncertainty as to where subsidies must end, he said, hinders private enterprise.

The Housing Authority will undoubtedly be able to profit by this and similar experience in our own country. If that agency is given an opportunity to develop a constructive program free of political influence and group pressure, but strictly in keeping with the spirit of the act, its service will not be measured by the relatively small sums now available for public housing.

"A Baltimore husband was fined $50 for kicking his wife out of bed."—Press report. Has our glorious heritage of liberty faded into insignificance? Is our vaunted freedom become a mockery and a thing to flout? Can a man no longer discipline his wife without the law butting in?

"I go into the pulpit with an empty head and let God fill it," declares a preacher. We've listened to preachers who pursued this policy, but the less we say about the capacity of their heads, the kinder we are.

An English lecturer in this country says Americans don't know how to use their leisure. He makes the mistake of judging all Americans by those who attend his lectures.

"Women in increasing numbers are taking up law," reports a magazine writer. Even so, they'll never be able to take up as much of it as they have laid down.

A lot has been said and written against fools, but this world would be a pretty dreary place without them.

Assess The Government.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the Government-owned property in the District paid the same taxes as privately owned property the "new tax program," referred to in Mr. Secret's article in The Post of October 17, would no longer be "inevitable." The Government owns probably not less than 40 per cent of the property in the District and should therefore pay 40 per cent of the taxes, instead of the stingy contribution of only about 12 per cent as now.

During a few years past many squares of formerly privately owned, and therefore, tax-paying property, have been taken over by the Government. Note, the whole "triangle," now covered by Government buildings, as also the squares taken for the Congressional Library Annex and the Supreme Court Building, several squares taken for the new buildings for the Agricultural and Interior Departments.

Your influential journal should continuously urge an amelioration of the present unfair treatment of the voteless Washington taxpayers. Call for an assessment of the Government's real estate and tangible "personal" property, such as we pay taxes on, so that the present glaring unfair treatment will be conspicuous. HENRY CALVER.

Washington, Oct. 18.

Orchid For Miss Hooper.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It happened on Sunday, October 3. I sneaked up on The Post as it lay fenestrated with sun and shadow, on the arm of an invitingly comfortable chair. Somehow I found myself scanning the editorial page. That was when I discovered that you had discovered gold. It was "Hollywood Retake," over the signature (or was it one of those de plume things) of Bett Hooper.

The title intrigued me—"Hollywood Retake." It sorter dovetailed with my interest in photography. Before I knew it, I had taken off into a piece of writing, believe you me, that I was to find extremely (modest word) fascinating.

I'm still wondering why a mere male should be interested, much less fascinated, in an essentially woman's story, regardless of how excellently it may be written. A singularly simple enough tale, this, of the irony of fame; of the re-creation of a marvelously feminine charm, dignity and simplicity into a glamorous Hollywood "you are, gorgeous" queen of the cinema via a bottle of peroxide and the esthete of a beautician, only to fall back again, because of a shift in public taste, to the original and naive daintiness which was hers in the first place.

Enormously interested in the technique of the narrative, I read it through again and again and again, trying to divine the secret (if secret it was) of its charm. I retreated in failure. I mean, I was unable to tell what made it sparkle, save that no small degree of its power lay in the clarity and simplicity, in the unmistakable force and verse of the feminine touch, and that Miss Hooper could write like an artist.

Another point is, the thing was so amazingly smooth. Order and progression were naturally there, of course, but under a stylistic control which seemed to have pitched the story in the even tempo of a musical score. By way of suggestiveness, it had words and phrases that were analogous of background tones, which in less capable hands would have required paragraphs. These angles of background in a word and a phrase, here and there, were really the story's cleverly woven background, all converging to a vanishing point, which was the shining facet of the story—its charm.

CLARENCE W. TOLIVER.

Washington, Oct. 13.

Early Concert Risers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I ask if any of your readers know what disease it is that afflicts Washington concert-goers with the symptoms of grabbing for wraps and tearing toward the nearest exit the minute the last number has been presented; but which causes them to all pile back into the concert hall to stand or sit willy-nilly, when music lovers like myself have by contant applause brought the performer back to the stage for an encore?

If these early risers have engagements to fill, why don't they continue on out of the hall and keep them? If, as it later appears, they desire to hear more (which artists are more than glad to give, I personally know), why don't they keep their proper seats until performers have indicated by a word to the audience or by the flashing of the hall lights, that they no longer wish to give encores?

I would appreciate your readers giving me the name of this disease which is prevalent among at least one-third of every concert audience in Washington.

The Bangor Clerk.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the Post of October 17 you had an editorial about the co-operation of local, State and Federal police in ending gangster Brady's career in Bangor, Me., last week.

You made a big fuss about no one trying to corner the credit, and spoke encouragingly of the teamwork that made this battle a success. But you failed to emphasize the real point of this gangster's end. It's Shep Hurd, the hardware store clerk, who should get the credit—a citizen who realized the responsibilities of citizenship. Instead of the reaction of 99 per cent of America's people to such a situation—"Well, it's none of my business and I'll let the police do the worrying; I'm not going to stick my neck out"—instead of that, Hurd quietly took the initiative and put the tremendous machinery of the law into action.

It isn't the magnificence of this machine's workings that should be glorified, even though it is admirable. It's the spark plug of the action—Shep Hurd—who should be honored. It was Shep Hurd who laid Brady as dead as a herring across the streetcar tracks; a citizen who did his part of government.

Snappy Comeback.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I noted your brief yip of October 7 regarding the too-long life of old maids. Would you suggest mass suicide, or would extermination suit you?

What ails you, Sweet? Is it indigestion or just plain cussedness?

A Tax On $2,000-A-Year Incomes?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As one who has opposed any form of suffrage so far proposed for the District of Columbia, I am glad to indorse the "ballot" in the form of a questionnaire sent to the members of the Chevy Chase Citizens Association. This same form could well be sent to every member of all of the citizens' associations.

One member of the Commissioners' tax survey committee has suggested, as reported by the local press, that an income tax would be advisable. And he had this observation to make: "That an income tax on a $2,000 salary would not be heavy or burdensome," just to cite one of several he mentioned. Perhaps not. Still practically every "survey" made in the United States of a similar nature within the last 20 years has reported that an average family requires not less than $2,500 to maintain a decent standard of living—and not one of these "surveys" comprehended an income tax on family incomes of less than $2,500 the year.

The last report put out by the Federal Government (last week, I believe) says that living costs in the District are the highest in any large city in the United States. So far as I can remember living costs in the District have "topped" all large cities since the World War.

Just what the person earning less than $2,500 would or could cut out of his "budget" in order to pay this proposed "$40 income tax" I have not the imagination to visualize. And I believe I am correct in saying the average Government employe receives in salary about $1,600, whether married or single, and from this is deducted 3½ per cent under the retirement law. Whether the average earnings of private employes in the District are $1,600—or more or less, I do not know. And may I observe that $40 out of the income of any person earning $2,000 a year would be "some out."

It would be enlightening indeed if the person making the suggestion would break down the figures on which he based his "$40 income tax."

I feel assured the Chevy Chase Citizens Association would be glad to co-operate with him in breaking down the figures.

Skyline.

WHAT mountains we climbed are to be found duly recorded in the ledger book in which you write the very last thing, after washing up the final dishes, chopping wood to replace what you have burned, and sweeping out the shelter. But there were other things we didn't write because they would look silly in the book and, besides, they must occur to everyone.

How good it feels to leave your car a steep mile behind you, with a note to the park police under the windshield wiper where to look for the body if you don't come back. Not to see a car for days, except at night in the Shenandoah Valley 3,000 feet below—small man-made stars, like an overflow from the swarming constellations, move drolly as if trying to find their way back into the sky. How good a cigarette tastes after you hike 5 miles to Skyland to buy it.

* * *

It was that rainy Labor Day and Skyland, the one civilized resort in the park, was jammed with disappointed people in Buicks, waiting helplessly for somebody to cook and serve them dinner. Their young, in white flannels, bought dreadful souvenirs of the view they could not see because of the fog. Disconsolately, they waved red pennants saying "Skyline Drive." At least, it would prove to some one that they had been there.

But they wouldn't have seen the mountains, anyway, even if the weather had been clear. That sounds pretty banal, but this is from long experience in driving through many mountains in many cars. From the steering wheel the scenery repeats itself, endlessly, a surfeit of picture postcards. You don't see anything of the mountains unless you live in them and the closer you live to them the better you see them. Maybe that's the idea of the Appalachian Mountain Club shelters, at least the part of the idea that appeals to me.

* * *

"It's an escape complex. A pitiful give-away. It comes from life in a comfortable apartment and from those spongy cushions in Government chairs."

Until this trip I had no answer for the Devil. I just went on, letting it be an escape complex. But this time we took Conrad along, who had never been farther from Washington than Rock Creek Park. There are few cushions in his Southwest home and not much that is wrapped in luxury in the surrounding alleys.

"Why don't they put one of them stars in a museum?" he said at first.

And on the first day's hike, where the Appalachian Trail runs within hailing distance of the Skyline Drive, Conrad was all for hailing.

"Jeese, les' go over and bum a ride. Ain't no sense in walking when you can catch a ride."

"O. K., Conrad, we'll go on back and get our own car. We can go for a nice easy drive somewhere, and close the windows to keep out the draught."

Conrad said something in four letters and kicked a rock half a mile down into the serene blue floor of the valley. But after the first day or two he began to give his answer. He even wanted to climb Old Rag, which was more than we cared to do. The first spoken word of his conversation came when he brought up a bucket from the spring. There were rather more leaves and flowers floating on top than usual. While we skimmed and drank he waited as if expecting some particular comment.

"Good water," I said accordingly.

"Jeese, that's the best we got yet. I held her right up under the mouth of the spring, Jeese, right where the water comes out of the cave. Better'n gettin' it any other way."

And on the last day, "Maybe some time we can find somewhere even worser than this."

Of course, this idea of finding the worser place could be carried to extremes. For instance, I understand that among members of the Appalachian Mountain Club there are those who visit the shelters during January snowstorms, just to prove that it can be done; and others, rock-climbers, who scorn the ordinary trails.

With any deliberate seeking after the hardest way to climb a mountain or the most uncomfortable way to spend the night I have no particular sympathy, at least no yearning to participate. But for ordinary, run-of-the-mine amateurs, softies, the present setup is swell. You can't see the mountains unless your feet hurt, and your backaches, and you otherwise feel wonderful. Then they are yours, to have and to hold, beyond all desire even to explain to the white-flanneled motorists what they are missing.

Go Easy On The King.

Tourists who catch an occasional glimpse of the gaudy trappings of royalty seldom consider the possibility that a king may be overworked. But one of England's most influential newspapers is suggesting that public sentiment demand a lessening of the duties required of England's King.

"Stop overworking the King," says the article, reviewing the past three months during which "showing the throne" has been a continuous program. Sympathetic observers have been noticing that King George, never of robust health, is betraying alarming signs of nervous breakdown. His fingers twitch as he takes a salute and his face contorts at times as if he were in pain.

The days when kings could torture those who annoyed them are long passed. It is the king now who is on the rack until quivering flesh and shaking limbs betray their human limitations.

The Soldier Of Narragansett.

A soldier of Rhode Island lay dying out at "Ganse"—
There were bullets through his waist-coat, there were shell holes in his pants;
Oh, a comrade stood beside him while his lifeblood ebbed away,
The wounded soldier faltered, as he took his comrade's hands,
And he said: "Ah, what a battle underneath the old grand stand!
Take a message and a token to some friends both good and stout,
And tell 'em I died fighting, though I don't know what about.

II.

"Tell my mother that her other sons shall comfort her old age,
For I was caught abruptly in a 'Guvnor's awful rage;
Ah, my father was a soldier and he bravely fought and bled,
But 'twas not beside the mutuels they found the old man dead;
Here I lie knee-deep in hot dogs, peanut shucks and all the rest
With a Racing Form my pillow and Jack's Green Sheet on my chest;
Please forgive me, mother darling; be consoled that I did die
In the Wars of Narragansett, though I never did know why.

III.

"Tell my sister not to weep for me and sob with drooping head
When the troops come marching home again with glad and gallant tread;
But to look upon them proudly and with happiness becus
They put down the insurrection (that's the thing Quinn said it was);
Have her hang my sword upon the wall and know I passed away
For the honor of Rhode Island, Rhode Island, U. S. A.;
And tell her not to feel the depths of sadness and despair—
(They're running now at Laurel; she can get a bet down there!")

Congress is less asinine—

When a mid-Victorian England
And the Swiss superior air
Make you feel a bit disgusted
With conditions everywhere——

When the naked statues bathing
In the shallow pools of Rome
Fill you with a bit of longing
For a bathing suit back home—

Pack your trunk and hurry westward
Not delaying for a day
To break through a line of pickets
In your dear old U. S. A.

I WONDER IF, when H. G. Wells got "A View of Things to Come," he saw that he was to make a personal appearance here in Washington on November 3 at Constitution Hall to speak on that very subject . . . Personally, I think it's a good thing he is coming several months before Sinclair Lewis, since Mr. Lewis recently referred to Mr. Wells as a "visiting fireman" . . . Probably that's Mr. Lewis' way of "Making Friends Go Like the Wind,' which is the subject on which he will elucidate . . . .

THE MANY FRIENDS here of Donald Parsons will be interested to know that his publishers are offering five prizes in his name for the five best essays of approximately 1,000 words based on themes suggested by Mr. Parsons' volume of poetry entitled "Glass Flowers, Sonnets and Other Poems" . . . Reviews are not desired . . . The idea is to write an original expression of opinion incident to the evaluation of poetry, its basic principles, its technique, tendencies and relations to human emotions . . . If I haven't made it clear, write to the John W. Luce Co., 212 Summer street, Boston . . . That prize would come in mighty handy just before Christmas . . . Yes, I'm already Christmas-conscious . . .

His name is Henry Gershwin . . . Mr. Gershwin deserves double praise because anybody who can write poetry in a sweltering Washington heat must really have what it takes . . .

Il Duce's Course

By S. Miles Bouton.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

ONCE MORE Great Britain and France have postponed calling Mussolini's bluff in the matter of Spanish intervention. Many Americans interested in foreign affairs—and the number of these is much higher today than ever before—find it difficult to understand Downing Street's tactics.

The impatient ones can be counseled to be patient—and this for a variety of reasons. One is that Mussolini is far from being as confident as he would have the world believe. The significance of his new steps toward autarchy should not escape any informed observer of foreign affairs. Although short of natural resources, Italy now talks of restricting imports, which plainly means that financial pressure has become more stringent.

Troops To Libya Do Not Suggest War.

ONE READS of transports of Italian troops to Libya, and the explanation is hazarded that the object is to compel France to weaken her home army by keeping more soldiers in the neighboring Tunisia. The explanation leaves much to be desired. If the Duce were expecting war he would not send any considerable number of across the Mediterranean. Despite his bluster about "8,000,000 bayonets" he knows that no country in modern times ever has or ever can put 20 per cent of its total populatic under arms, and that, if war comes, Italy will have worries closer home than Libya and Tunisia.

Some of these transports will doubtless land in Spain, and other members of the expedition will find themselves in Ethiopia. A fortnight or more ago an English newspaper reported the wiping out of an Italian garrison in northern Ethiopia by insurgent natives. Rome denied the report officially and indignantly, but later news confirmed it in effect if not in detail. It is also significant that Italian newspapers, which may print nothing not desired by the government, have been complaining that Great Britain is deliberately fomenting unrest among the Ethiopian tribesmen.

Mussolini takes babes from the cradle and arms them, and the schools have now been ordered to emphasize the beauties and glories of the military spirit, but war is the last thing he desires, despite all this. For one thing—I make no apologies for repeating this—he knows quite well that an alliance in war with Germany would be suicidal. He knows, as the Belgian government also knows, that no reliance can be placed on Hitler's agreements, treaties, understandings, promises or pacts.

It is known also that he does not like Der Fuehrer and does not trust him. A story told when Hitler visited him some three years ago, while naturally not true, nevertheless may illustrate the Italian dictator's feelings. It reported that Hitler left his airplane and advanced toward the Duce with upraised arm and the greeting, "Hail, Imperator!" to which Mussolini responded, "Hail, Imitator!" It is also no secret that Mussolini feels that Hitler's ruthlessness has damaged the cause of Fascism. The Duce, to be sure, has also had opponents murdered and others banished to desolate islands, but he has not reached the heights of barbarism attained by the German dictator.

Address By Roosevelt Stiffened Democracies.

IN CONSIDERING Italy's probable future course it will not do to overlook another big factor. That is America. President Roosevelt's recent peace talk has mightily stiffened the backbone of the democratic peoples of the Old World, and correspondingly depressed the dictatorships. Speaking in Bristol, England, on October 14, Roger W. Babson told the Congregational Union Assembly that "if Britain needs any help to defend civilization, America will always send men, money and goods." Mr. Babson is right, as we shall discover if and when war comes, despite all talk in some quarters about "pulling England's chestnuts out of the fire." For they will be our chestnuts, too.

It is not fear of the outcome of war that explains the hesitant tactics of London and Paris. It is fear of war as such—that fear held by all nations which subscribe to Sir Samuel Hoare's declaration that "the militarist philosophy and its spectacular demonstrations are signs of arrested development." While it is unlikely that the two governments regard belligerent action by Italy as probable, the possibility, remote though it may be, cannot be lightly disregarded. Fanaticism is incalculable and unpredictable. But if it becomes necessary to fight to keep Italy and Germany from acquiring control of Spain—and Franco's victory would mean that in effect—they will fight.

They must then fight. The struggle would be not merely for Spain's mineral wealth, great though this is. Enemy control of the Mediterranean would mean for France that no transport of colonial troops could reach France without a naval battle. What it would mean for Great Britain if Germany became a Mediterranean power was demonstrated in the World War. And the ultimate possibility of a German-Italian alliance, as pointed out above, improbable though it is, still exists. Fanaticism can always commit suicide.

The chief naval bases of the imperial German marine in 1915-1918 in the Adriatic Sea were the then Austrian harbors of Pola and Cattaro, the first of which is now Italian, the other Yugoslav. The German submarine flotilla of Pola was a part of the so-called Mediterranean division of the imperial marine under Admiral Souchon. Its field of operations covered the entire western Mediterranean as far as the North African and west Moroccan coast.

Successful Submarines Found In Mediterranean.

THE TWO most successful submarine commanders both belonged to the Mediterranean division. These were Capt.-Lieut. Lothar Arnauld de la Perriere, who sank 400,000 tons, and Capt.-Lieut. Walter Frostmann, who sent 380,000 tons to the bottom.

But—and this is what the British and French statesmen know and will not forget—these successes could not have been even approximately so great if the German submarines, especially those on the African coasts, so far removed from their bases, had not found bases in the harbors of the then nominally neutral Spain, above all in Cartagena, the Canary Islands and the Balearics. The operations of the UC 20, for example, which was ordered in January, 1917, to land agents on the western coast of Morocco to incite the natives to rise up against the French, would have been impossible without the support of the Royal Spanish marine officials on the Canary Islands.

The same can be said of other operations, such as the sinking of an English and two French merchant ships between Algiers and Bizerta by the U38 in November, 1915, the torpedoing of two English steamers between Algiers and Oran by the U34 in April, 1916, and the sinking of the French warship Rigel by Arnauld de la Perriere south of the Balearics in September, 1916. The famous raid of Capt.-Lieut. Hersing, who in May, 1915, torpedoed two British ships of the line, the Majestic (15,150 tons) and the Triumph (12,000 tons), would likewise have been impossible without the "benevolent neutrality" of the Spanish military officials.

(It can be reported, for whatever significance it may have, that Germany's new Ambassador to the Franco government was the right-hand man of the German Ambassador during the World War, and his espionage activities finally became so notorious that he was asked to leave. Primo de Rivera, then Spanish Minister of War, had to resign in the last year of the war.)

The Marine-Rundschau, official organ of the German marine, published in 1930 a study of "Spain's Naval Rank." It refers to the Spanish war harbors in the Mediterranean, and comments:

"Picture what would have happened if the German submarine campaign had had such a splendid base."

Admiral Raeder, now head of the German navy, was its head also in 1930.

Downing street will "muddle through" as long as there is any prospect that muddling will avoid war and keep Spain out of the hands of Mussolini and Hitler. But only so long.

"Winfield Scott."

WITH MAJ. Elliott's 763-page biography of Winfield Scott, "the soldier and the man," the interment of the scintillant school of biographers which flourished until the beginning of this decade appears to have been completed with almost a formal ceremony. Curiously enough, Maj. Elliott quotes, in between dedication and foreword, a typically scintillant paragraph of Philip Guedalla, almost the sole remaining practitioner of the faded fashion of brilliance, in which Mr. Guedalla describes what is not biography.

There is of course no intentional irony in Maj. Elliott's use of the quotation, but the unintentional irony is clear enough. There is almost no kinship, as literary effort, between the type of biography represented by Maj. Elliott's book and that practiced by Mr. Guedalla, Mr. Lytton Strachey and Mr. Gamaliel Bradford, to name the principal figures of the movement. Mr. Douglas Southall Freeman's meticulously monumental "R. E. Lee" has been the high-water mark of the tide which has flowed since.

Yet a tide not quite in reverse. As in all pendular swings in literature, the succeeding school is marked by the influence of the preceding. There appears little question that the architectural constructions of Mr. Freeman and of Maj. Elliott have gained in color of writing and patience of sympathy from the careful brilliances of the galaxy which preceded them.

• • • •

CERTAINLY, Maj. Elliott's Scott is not a simple factual compilation. In its chapters Jefferson alternately is a "practical statesman" who, "despite the rufous hue of his hair, was not inclined to pugnacity" amid the broils with England, and a former President who adds "vindictively" in a letter to a friend that we must retaliate by hiring incendiaries to set fires in London if the British should burn New York or Boston. Thaddeus Stevens is "vulpine." But Maj. Elliott's special anxiety in painting minor characters is exerted upon President Polk and Maj. Gen. Gideon Pillow. They are painted in a sickly green, reminiscent of El Greco. The latter, incidentally, appears to as little advantage in Maj. Elliott's Mexican War pages as he did later in his inglorious flight from Fort Donelson prior to its surrender to Grant.

Saltily done as are the minor characters in Maj. Elliott's narrative, there is no disproportion, and Winfield Scott, lieutenant general, conqueror of Mexico and almost-President, bulks as large in this book as even he could have desired. A youthful lawyer who drifted almost haphazardly into the Army before there was a West Point, he yet conducted the first American war which was fought upon any respectable military principles. An inveterate dabbler in politics, several times an apparent Presidential choice, he yet failed to gain that office. So vain as to have almost committed "suicide with a goose quill" in his hasty letter-writing, to quote Maj. Elliott, he yet won the respect and affection of the great majority of his soldiers, of the great men he met and of the people at large.

• • • •

"TO PARAPHRASE what Lord Morley said of Gladstone," Maj. Elliott says in his summation, "the more you make of his errors and weaknesses, the more necessary it is to explain his vast renown, the long-continued span of his authority in the councils, military and civil, of the Nation, the substance and reality of his powers, and his tenacious hold on the affections of the people.

"To a certain extent Scott must be fairly said to belong to this category (those who reflect others' glory) among the illustrious of the earth. But there was also a 'depth and force of character,' a transcendent honesty of purpose and a purity of patriotic nationalism in his cosmos which drew to him the affectionate regard, the confidence and hearty respect of men greater as well as less than himself."

• • • •

THE TASK OF depicting this character, Maj. Elliott performs with skill, with admirably exhaustive exploration of new course material, and with a careful regard for the truth which arises from correct balance and not merely from factual listing. There is no flaw to his work which requires mention save one which is perhaps personal to this reviewer. It is surprising that Maj. Elliott, as a soldier, has minimized the military operations he describes with clarity but never with sufficient detail or color. Perhaps he deliberately "wrote down" these phases of Scott's career because they occupied a relatively short span of the general's life, as compared with his political and other activities. But, after all, Scott's primary claim upon posterity is as a soldier, the founder, to a greater extent than is now realized, of the modern American military system. Further, Scott's greatness found its fullest expression always in battle, both as officer actually in combat at Lundy's Lane and as commanding strategist at Churubsco and Chapultepec.

But this is a minor quibble, Maj. Elliott succeeds admirably in his main task, and that task is one worthy of any biographies:

The celebration of integrity, of that character which triumphs even over its own anomalies.

Gelett Burgess

By William Lyon Phelps

No Purple Cows.

This is the title of a new and excellent book by the famous writer, Gelett Burgess, who many years ago added a word to the English language—"Bromide," which he used in a new sense, now known everywhere.

He also wrote many charming books of verse and prose, and in 1934 a remarkably original and exciting murder novel, called "Two O'Clock Courage."

He has had many opportunities to observe men and women and to study human nature, as he has lived in Massachusetts, New York, San Francisco and for many years in France.

• • • •

This new book, with many photographs strengthening the damaging evidence he brings forward in print, is good for everybody over 25 years old; though it is mainly intended for those of early and late middle age—supply the figures yourself.

This is an entirely different work and urges a different method from those that are intended to make men and women increase their beauty or their charm or their influence. There is no use in looking younger unless you carry the vigor and make the impression that should go with it. Mr. Burgess shows how the majority of people relapse into an acquiescence of superfluousness; and yet they wonder why they are passed over and regarded as of no particular value. It is their own fault, and a fault they can correct.

I do not believe that anytone has pointed out before the danger of mannerisms. I recommend this book to everybody over his or her first youth. It is published by Simon and Schuster, New York.

Tom McCarthy

He's Not Nervous, Mind You!

IT'S NOT that I'm nervous. No siree! I never felt calmer in my life.

I know my friends have remarked about a mild dilation of the pupils, and the habit of putting my hat on and then looking all around the office for it. But I don't think it's really a case of nerves.

"Mike fright?" Why, I don't know the meaning of it. Well, that is I don't really think I was ever terribly nervous. Leastways, I never really broke down completely.

TOM McCARTHY.

No, it's not that I'm nervous. It's just that I'm a bit abstracted. I mean I can't quite get——. Well, you see how it is. But it's not nervousness.

Of course I haven't faced a microphone in nigh unto five months. And I suppose that's why these thoughts keep running through my head. You see anything can happen in front of that microphone. And so often it does.

I'm not really thinking of such times as the night on my news broadcast, when I dramatically zoomed down over Madrid with the Fascist planes, "bopping drombs." The Fascist boys may have been dropping bombs but I, by the testimony of my listeners, was "bopping drombs." Personally I always felt that I was on the humanitarian side in that incident anyway.

And when you come right down to it, I was much better off than a real rapid fire announcer, whose feat is now legend. My mistake came in the midst of a dramatic air raid over Madrid. His came right at the beginning of his broadcast, when he rushed to the microphone to deliver his high speed, "Good evening ladies and gentlemen." And his greeting emerged as "G'ladies evening and gentlemen."

• • • •

AND EVEN such old hands as Bill Coyle, of N. B. C., are not immune from such breaks. In fact my "bopping drombs," or even the night I put a high wind in the "tee trops," was less embarrassing than Bill's break. He was introducing the Hon. Jesse Jones of Reconstruction Finance Corporation to a waiting public from coast to coast.

Bill wound up with, "And now ladies and gentlemen, we bring to the microphone a man whose name has become known throughout the Nation as the head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation." Bill paused for dramatic effect and introduced the listening audience to "the Hon. Jesse JAMES!"

But I'm really not thinking of that kind of thing, when I say that anything can happen in front of that microphone. I'm thinking of the night Ted Kimball decided to shave during the 15-minute period I was on the air. And the night I discovered that my interview subject couldn't read.

At the time I didn't know that Ted had left the studio for a few minutes to prepare for a party. I only knew that I finished up my news broadcast, and looked up expecting to see Ted hovering about preparatory to taking me off the air.

I was all through, had said everything that I could say, and just wanted to back away from the microphone and call it a day. However, there was no Ted. So I started in with "And now, ladies and gentlemen," a long pause, and still no sign of Ted. "We have come to the end of another program——," and I left it hanging there with another long pause.

After that I'm not at all sure as to what I did say. I do know, however, that I used up a good 2½ minutes delivering the most tortured "good night," that ever went into a radio microphone. And when I finally had to drop back from the microphone, it was like a reprieve from hanging to see Ted coming down the hall.

With a shaving brush in one hand and a razor in the other, his face completely lathered, he was tearing down the hall at a dead run, trailing soap behind him. He took the program off the air in record time, and to this day I suppose the only wonder in the listeners' minds was as to why I spent 2½ minutes saying "good night."

• • • •

HOWEVER, HUGH TAYLOR, one of the witnesses at the Senate investigation of conditions in Harlan County, gave me some of my worst moments. And they came before we ever reached the studio. Hugh, a mountain man and one time deputy in Harlan, was in Washington to testify to being taken for a ride, shot three times, and left to die.

Hugh's story was nothing if not dramatic. So I interviewed him with an eye to putting him on the air. I wrote up the dialogue for the broadcast two days before Taylor testified before the La Follette committee. I figured that as soon as he'd testified and made news I could rush him right up to the studio for the interview.

"We can go on the air tonight," I told him. "I've got the interview all written up. You read the answers to the questions I ask you. I've written down just what you told me."

I asked the first question. And Hugh looked blankly at the answer on his page of the script.

"All right," I told him, "go ahead and read the answer to my question."

Hugh looked at the typewritten sheet.

"What's the trouble, Hugh?"

"Well, you see, I don't read very well," he told me.

The scheduled broadcast was just two hours away when I discovered that Hugh couldn't read!

Fortunately, he'd told his story so many times that he always told it the same way. So I was able to bring him on and trust to his memory.

• • • •

But it's some of these things I'm thinking about when I go looking around the office for my hat while it's safely perched on my head.

I'm not nervous, mind you! And I'll be seeing you at the Umbrella Court of the Air tonight, come 9 o'clock, over at Station WMAL.

Trafficlubs Set Up by 2 More Capital Schools

Eastern and Anacostia Join in Drive to Improve Safety Conditions.

Two additional high school "Trafficlubs"—one at Eastern and another at Anacostia High School—were organized yesterday under the supervision of Richard Ham, American Automobile Association safety director.

At 3 p. m. today, students at Roosevelt High School will join the movement with a meeting to adopt plans for improving traffic safety conditions on streets adjacent to the school building.

At yesterday's meeting in the Anacostia School, Principal J. P. Collins said he would hold the "Trafficlub" responsible for the safety of students en route to and from classes.

Dr. Harry A. Smith, assistant superintendent of schools, lauded members of the club at Eastern and told them the school board was "behind them to the limit."

Both schools appointed committees to chose permanent officers and to study recommendations for safety in their respective areas. The student safety leaders were given an opportunity to examine A. A. A. driver testing devices.

Duke Review Plea Unopposed by U.S.

The Government told the Supreme Court yesterday that it does not oppose a review of litigation filed by the Duke Power Co., challenging constitutionality of PWA loans and grants for publicly-owned hydro-electric projects.

It is generally believed the review will be granted, since the court already has agreed to pass on similar litigation brought by the Alabama Power Co.

The company opposed the $2,852,000 Public Works Administration loan and grant to Greenwood County, S. C., for an electric plant at Buzzard Roost. The Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals ruled for the Government.

Red Cross Exceeds Quota in Campaign

The goal of 75,000 memberships set for the twenty-first Red Cross roll call which closed at midnight Saturday, was exceeded on Monday, the first reporting day after the close of the campaign, it was announced yesterday. There are a number of scattering returns yet to be received.

Marcy L. Sperry, general chairman, asked that his heartiest gratitude and thanks be extended to the people of Washington for the splendid manner in which they responded to the appeal.

Week-End Visitors Total 14,391 at Shenandoah

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., Oct. 19.—Visitors to the Shenandoah National Park through its Front Royal entrance on Saturday and Sunday totaled 14,391 persons for the two days, a check by park employes revealed today. This represents the largest number of visitors of the season for a week-end, with the exception of the Labor Day and Fourth of July week-ends, they said.

O'Connor Asks Lower Margins To Stop Slump

Reserve Board Silent on Request; Glass Urges "Hands-Off Policy.

By Robert C. Albright.

Surveying the wildest gyrations on the New York stock market in four years, official Washington yesterday maintained a policy of strict aloofness, despite conflicting Congressional demands for action and inaction.

Withholding comment, Federal Reserve Board officials gave no indication the board is considering immediately lowering 55 per cent margin requirements on stock purchases.

In Washington overnight, Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, former chairman of the Senate Banking Committee and one of the authors of the Federal Reserve act, favored a hands-off-the-market policy by the board.

Lower Margins Urged.

But Chairman John J. O'Connor of the House Rules Committee wired the Federal Reserve governors to lower margin requirements for purchases and increase margins on short trading. O'Connor told the board "something should be done at once." Then he telegraphed the New York Stock Exchange governors to "clean your own house."

In reply to a question, Senator Glass said "the trouble is some people have been trying to do too much to the stock market already." He said the Federal Reserve Board had no part in "gambling" operations.

"The Federal Reserve Board has nothing to do with the stock market," said the Virginian. "All it has is the right to fix margins, and it ought never to have been given that. It should be kept as free from the stock market as it is possible to keep it. The board was established to minister to the industries of agriculture and commerce, and to nothing else."

The Securities and Exchange Commission was in session nearly all day, but officials said thig was "usual." Ernest A. Angell, regional director of the commission's staff in New York, was called back to Washington last night, after canceling an earlier scheduled press interview.

Movements Watched.

The commission's New York staff has been watching stock movements for signs of manipulation, but SEC spokesmen declined comment on reports that evidence of short sales to depress the market had been found. "The commission is going to name no scapegoats," one official said.

At Hyde Park, sources close to the President said he is not considering use of his authority to close the exchange. The SEC act gives him this power for periods up to 90 days.

Mr. Roosevelt was returning to Washington last night, and at 3 p. m. today (market closing time) will dedicate the new Federal Reserve Board Building. He said he was not contemplating any references to the stock market in his address.

The Federal Reserve Board met yesterday with the presidents of the 12 Federal Reserve banks, here to attend today's dedication ceremonies. The group holds two or three conferences a year with the board. Only system problems were discussed, it was said, without reference to the stock market situation.

It was clear that the board was not going to be stampeded into any action looking to reduction of margin requirements and probably would continue for the time being its present "hands-off" policy.

Indications were that the board would do nothing now, but whenever it appears necessary in the public interest will not hesitate to take steps deemed desirable.

Despite outward calm, inward concern appeared all along the financial front at yesterday's early trading developments, with hopes somewhat revived by the closing upturn.

Representative O'Connor sent telegrams not only to the Federal Reserve governors but to the New York Stock Exchange governors as well, urging that short sales be stopped or the margin on such trading increased.

"You should clean your own house first rather than pass the buck to the Administration," the New Yorker wired the exchange governors.

"The first thing you should do is either stop all short sales or require the short gamblers to put up as much margin as the legitimate buyers."

He telegraphed the Federal Reserve governors:

"Respectfully suggest something should be done at once in reference to situation in securities markets.

"The margin required for purchases should be considerably lowered and short sales should be stopped or the margin greatly increased."

Then, in a statement to the press, O'Connor said continually declining prices constitute a menace to industry, producers of commodities and the banking structure, although security fluctuations are not a prime index to business.

Asks Congress to Watch.

He said Congress should watch the situation carefully and "do everything possible to bring about stabilization, to prevent another crash and prolonged 'business recession.' He declared that "gambling sins of the past of some operators have not yet been expiated."

"As a first attempt at housecleaning," he said, "let them increase at once the margin requirements for short selling, and let them publish each day the short sales, so as to furnish a comparison with the buying."

The New York representative said the Securities and Exchange Commission should stop "snooping" if it is "unduly annoying or interfering with legitimate business." He said the commission should confine its activities "to a proper and American method of administering the law entrusted to it."

Modification Urged.

Restrictions on "insiders" dealing in stocks of their own companies should be modified if they are too severe and detrimental to stabilizing the market.

The New Yorker insisted he had no brokerage accounts of his own, but was concerned lest falling security prices affect employment and business.

"Business and employment," he said, "just cannot stand another stock market crash, no matter what the public may think of the markets or the people operating on them."

If an investigation is found necessary, he said, Congress should start one as soon as possible.

Speculation turned here yesterday on whether the Administration would abandon its 1938 budget balancing aims, and start up pump-priming operations anew, if the market decline continues.

Strong Measures Asked.

Some of the President's left-wing advisers here are known to favor a resumption of spending, regardless of budget aims, should a business recession develop. Secretary of Commerce Roper, on the other hand, told a recent press conference he thought pump-priming will not be resumed.

From Chicago, Representative A. J. Sabath, of Illinois, Democratic "dean" of the House, wired President Roosevelt that the stock market slump was traceable directly to a "Wall Street conspiracy," according to Associated Press.

He asked that "strong measures be taken against them immediately to save the Nation from a recurrence of the 1929 debacle."

Feverish trading in stocks produced this scene in a financial news department. Operators were literally snowed under ribbons of ticker tape as the men labored to keep the quotations moving out over the market wires.

Market Rallies After Another Selling Storm

7,287,000 Shares of 1,043 Issues Traded; Leaders Close Higher.

still predominated at the finish, although some staples had recovered. Cotton, down somewhat soon after the opening, averages unchanged to 30 cents a bale higher at the close.

Wheat at Chicago was down 3 cents a bushel at one time, but the closing prices were only 1⅜@2¼ cents lower. Corn was down ½@1¼ cents.

Federal Issues Lower.

The bond market was off sharply, particularly lower priced issues. Price averages show the sharpest losses in more than three years. Federal loans also turned sharply lower for the first time since the Government several weeks ago announced modifications in its gold sterilization program.

Throughout the day traders and industrialists alike watched the financial tickers for news from Washington as well as from the trading floors of the Nation's securities and commodities exchanges.

President Roosevelt, official sources said, has no intention of exercising his authority to close the stock exchange. At his press conference at Hyde Park he would not discuss the decline. In response to a direct question he further said he was not contemplating any references to the market in his address in Washington tomorrow when he dedicates the new Federal Reserve Board Building.

A. P. Average Higher.

That the SEC was keeping a close watch on the market was apparent. Around 2 o'clock it was announced newspapermen would be called into the New York office of the commission after the close of the market. Shortly before 3 p. m., however, it was further announced that Ernest Angell, head of the New York office, had been summoned to Washington. The meeting with newspapermen was called off.

Although the day's transactions on the exchange showed 744 declines and 189 advances, the extent of the rally in leading issues carried the Associated Press closing average of 60 stocks to $45.30—20 cents higher than yesterday's finish.

Fully half an hour before trading opened, it was known that brokers would precipitate an avalanche of selling orders as soon as the gong was sounded.

Until the early hours this morning, the activity in the financial district was at full capacity, as brokers checked up on the losses of yesterday. Some houses, which had let off employes in the quiet markets of not so many weeks ago, sent word for them to come back.

Calls were sent out to those who traded on margins, instructing them that their accounts would be sold out if more margin was not put up this morning.

1,045 Issues Traded.

The ticker was behind the actual trading from the outset—two minutes right after the opening, then three and soon it was ten minutes behind. Just before noon, it was 22 minutes late. To remedy this, the stock exchange periodically listed floor prices on the bond ticker, which was up-to-the-minute.

The number of stock issues traded in during the day—by which traders compute the breadth of a day's transactions—was 1,045, the largest on record. The total number of issues listed on the exchange is only 1,253.

Shouting on the floor of the exchange could be heard outside as far as Trinity Church, a block up Wall street—where, legend has it, Jay Gould went to pray after his "gold corner" was broken on that "black Friday" years ago.

One of the oddities in the day was in a transaction in American Chain & Cable preferred, the last sale of which was on August 25, at $150. A hundred shares were offered early today and they went for $86 a share.

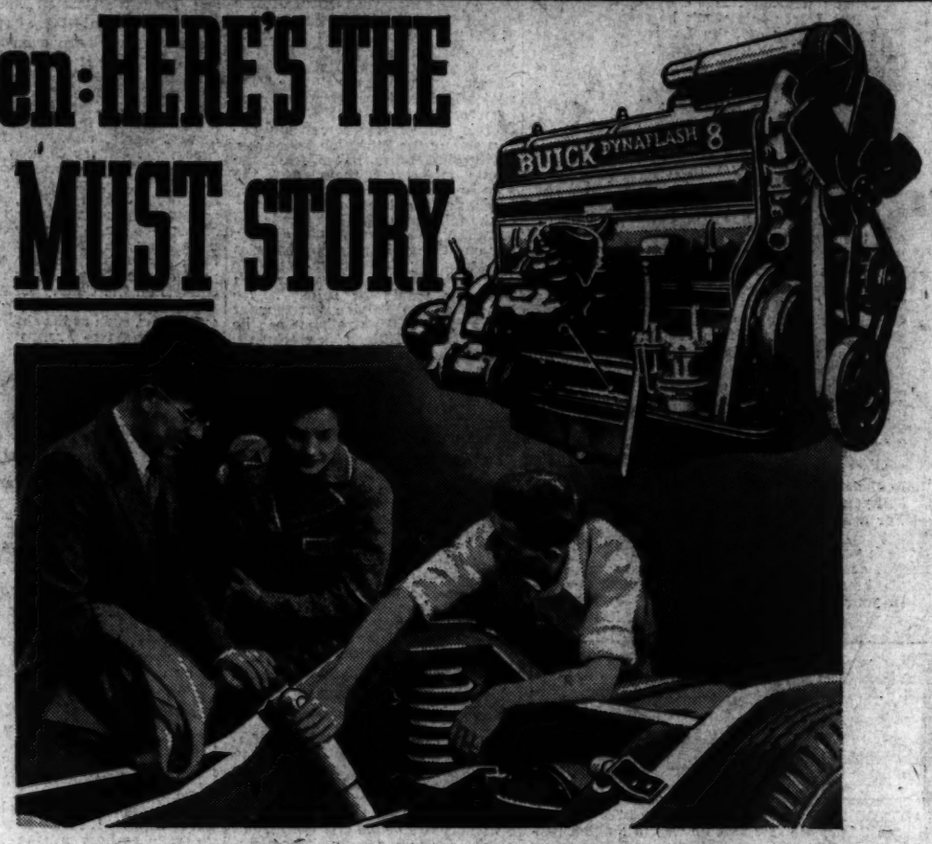
All set? listen: HERE'S THE ENGINEERING MUST STORY OF THE YEAR!


Featuring the DYNAFLASH ENGINE and TORQUE-FREE SPRINGING — in the Most Modern Chassis in the World

THE GAS TREADLE on the new Buick looks like any other, the wheel has a familiar feel in your hand.

But you won't drive a hundred yards behind the DYNAFLASH engine without sensing that something new and different is going on.

Leaping to meet it is the piston, with a unique device called a Turbulator built into its face.

Then occurs something more than high-compression — literally cyclompression — as this swirling gale of gasoline vapor is compacted about the spark plug.

The fat spark leaps—a fist-size hurricane lets go—and gasoline vapor gives up more performance than it has ever given up before in a commercial engine!

THIS might seem enough for inspired engineering to lavish on a car in a single season.

But with this brilliant new power goes TORQUE-FREE SPRINGING and the matchless new arrowflite ride it provides.

Take a Buick over a railroad crossing, or search out a bumpy road. Wheels may dance but the body rides level!

Skid risks are blessedly reduced. Rear tires last measurably longer. The whole eager car handles more surely and easily.

And summer or winter, with 50 or 50,000 miles behind you, you have the same soft cushioning unaltered by either wear or weather!

★ ★ ★

IF it's power you're after, you'll choose Buick this year for its new DYNAFLASH engine.

If it's matchless comfort and security, you'll want TORQUE-FREE SPRINGING.

With either you get the other—plus half a score of other important features.

THIS CAR SHIFTS FOR ITSELF!
Buick SPECIAL, Series 40 models can be obtained on special order with the new Buick Self-Shifting Transmission built in at the factory, at extra cost. In all ordinary driving, gear shifts are made up or down automatically, without attention to clutch or gas treadle and without taking your hand from the wheel. 90% of all travel is in a new quiet "fourth" speed which saves 10% or more on gas and up to 50% on oil. Front seat floor is cleared by removal of gear shift lever.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

President Roosevelt went to heaven (that always draws a laugh), glanced around, and offered a re-organization plan. St. Peter glanced at it dubiously.

"Well," said Mr. Roosevelt, "how about it?"

"I don't know, for sure," mused the Saint, "how the Lord will like being Vice President."

* * *

One of the thrills of girls from the wide open spaces who have come to the chivalrous Capital for careers is the sensation of standing up in a street car, while half a dozen healthy males hide behind their papers. But they console themselves that they have equal rights, eh?

* * *

Washingtonians who have seen the new musical show, "Virginia," about early Revolutionary days in Virginia, now appearing at Rockefeller Center in New York, are inclined to believe that John D. Rockefeller wrote it himself . . . It has the Rockefeller zip and gayety about it. A bit of Americana, like nearby Williamsburg, so popular with the Washingtoon weekenders.

"—a frazzled treaty exhibit"

These are days of direct action, so since a taxi socked my fenders $26 worth, I have induced a dozen people who use the cabs daily never to use one operated by the company which airily declined to entertain my claim . . . I estimate that I'll obtain several hundred dollars worth of revenge that way.

* * *

But how will that recover my $26? . . . Well, I merely refrain from using cabs mornings and evenings, as I have been accustomed to, and drive my own car or ride the convenient buses . . . It will take me about 40 days, I estimate, to recoup . . . Anyhow, I have a deep suspicion that some of Washington's most ferocious drivers are fascist tank pilots in disguise.

* * *

I think it would pep things up a little around the State Department if Secretary Hull would arrange an exhibit of damaged and tattered treaties in the main corridor, near the entrance . . . Each treaty could be shown with a jagged, zig-zag rip down the middle, and a little blutwurst or macaroni juice staining the margins, with a small bloody Jap thumbprint here and there.

* * *

Some of the treaties would appear to have been put to queer uses . . . The Kellogg Pact, in fact, would seem to have been used to wrap up some international garbage, while the Nine-Power Treaty has been slept on by non-bathers . . . Maybe Secretary Hull could start a new era in diplomacy by having all his treaties engraved on thick sheets of copper.

"——t nk pilots in disguise"

When Justice Brandeis was younger he (so goes a tale I don't believe) followed his democratic inclinations by riding the bus to the Supreme Court, and one day he gave up his seat (his bus seat, not his seat on the bench) to an elderly lady. But a big oaf of a man slipped into it and sat there, glaring up pig-gishly at the justice, who glared back reproachfully.

"Well," said the oaf, finally, "going to eat me up, huh?"

"No," said the justice. "I can't, I am a Jew."

* * *

In the titantic battle of the picture magazines, LOOK has apparently drawn first blood from LIFE—last week LIFE ran an ad saying it appeals to people who "prefer knowing to looking." . . . That's what LOOK gets for attaining 1,750,000 circulation to LIFE'S 1,250,000 . . . My own private opinion still is that only one picture in a hundred is worth the space, and that any competent reporter can tell the reader more in half a column than a picture can in three columns—and more beguilingly.

* * *

Don't get the notion that the Supreme Court spends all its afternoons listening to dry-as-dust cases . . . In one afternoon I heard argued before the Eight Wise Old Men and Justice Black (the wise young 'un) cases involving whether (1) a store can offer an overcoat free with a purchase of a suit; (2) whether a gift received by an ex-employe from an ex-boss is taxable as income; and (3) whether a book-agent can give a customer a set of books free (because he's such an important citizen), provided the customer will pay $6.40 a year or so for ten years . . . No wonder the Justices seldom doze off on the bench.

Yaden Assails Inactivity of Federation

Columbia Heights Group Oppose Shift in School Control.

Attacking the "do nothing" policy of the Federation of Citizens Associations, J. G. Yaden, delegate to the federation for more than 14 years, last night refused re-election as delegate representing the Petworth Citizens Association.

Speaking to more than 50 members of the association last night at the Petworth School, Yaden said members of Congress were receiving no action which could be counted on as being "truly representative of organized citizenry."

Yaden formerly served as president of the federation for a period of five years. His position as delegate was taken by H. J. Phelps.

Earl W. Cooper was re-elected president of the association, and Raymond E. Cable secretary. New officers elected were Ben Brown, treasurer, and D. A. Spencer, sergeant at arms.

The association also adopted a resolution providing for the dispatch of a communication to District Commissioners requesting that the vicinity of Roosevelt High School be zoned as dry territory. The action was directed at establishment of liquor stores in the school section.

Members joined with other civic organizations in protesting the use of the Tuberculosis Hospital as a maternity ward for Gallinger Hospital and requested that it be used as a recreation center for children.

School Shift Protested.

Members of the Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights last night went on record as opposing the request of District Commissioners that the School Board be placed under their jurisdiction.

Meeting in the Powell Junior High School in their first session, the forum also adopted a resolution opposing the proposal that the Tuberculosis Hospital be transferred to Gallinger Hospital. The transfer proposal calls for use of the Tuberculosis Hospital as a maternity ward for Gallinger.

Nominations of new officers were also made at last night's meeting and a discussion held on the problem of the proposed 1939 budget for the District.

Southeast Citizens.

William A. Maio, president, and the complete staff of officers of the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations, were re-elected at a meeting last night in the No. 11 Police Precinct station.

More than 25 delegates attended and adopted a resolution asking District Commissioners to eliminate traffic dangers caused by buses and taxicabs stopping in the center of streets. The council requested that the vehicles be required to stop as near to the curb as possible before discharging or taking on passengers.

A resolution calling for action on the extension of Minnesota avenue to Benning road also was adopted.

Death Sends Auto Toll to 85; 2 Are Injured

Matthew J. Cusack, 50, of 1931 Sixteenth street northwest, was killed last night by a truck while he was walking across John Marshall place near Pennsylvania avenue. His death brought the District traffic toll to 85 for the year, in comparison with 70 at the same time last year.

Police found a radiator cap and a length of wire near Cusack's body. Four blocks from the scene police found a park truck which had no radiator cap. When they found the cap fitted the truck's radiator, the four occupants were held for questioning.

Mrs. Jessie Graves, 62, of 5203 Chevy Chase Parkway, suffered fractures of both legs and her left arm when struck last night by an automobile at Tenth and F streets northwest. She was taken to Emergency Hospital, where her condition was described as serious. Police said the driver was Walter A. Johnson, 35, colored, 112 Canal street southeast.

Cora Bell, colored, 24, of 804 Second street northwest, suffered a fractured right leg when she was struck by a hit-run automobile at Fessenden street and Wisconsin avenue northwest. She was taken to Georgetown Hospital.

An umbrella which obscured her vision was blamed yesterday for an accident which sent Mrs. Annie Moore, 22, of Norbeck, Md., to Montgomery County General Hospital with a broken left arm. She was crossing the road at Norbeck when struck by a car operated by Samuel Prather, also of Norbeck. He was making a left turn from the Seventh street pike into Route 28 in a heavy rain.

Post Staff Photos.

Shenandoah families turned their backs on the only home they have known for years yesterday and began a new life in a model Government community. Upper left—The family prepares its last meal around the old stove (left to right): Mrs. Seal, Elda, 14; Charlotte, 12; Leon, 8, and Raymond Seal, the father. Upper right—Vergil and Sylvia Maxine Seal sit beside their barreled and packed belongings. Lower—The new home (left) and the family of Fred Seal lingering about the front porch of their old home.

If the rain "clears up" and enough creeks go down, big CCC trucks will push their way into high coves of the Shenandoah National Park this morning to begin moving 175 mountain families from the park area down into the new homes built for them by the old Resettlement Administration.

All-day showers and penetrating mists delayed the moving yesterday, although four households had their "plunder" packed and were ready to take up residence in Ida Valley at 7:45 a. m.

The first begun, it will be the first opened of seven small farming communities developed as the Shenandoah homesteads. Stretching over five Virginia counties, the seven settlements cover 7,000 acres and, according to Senator Harry F. Byrd, have cost the "wasteful sum" of approximately $1,500,000.

Madison Project to Open.

The Madison Courthouse project will be the second opened, probably sometime this week. It has 16 homes, all completed. The Greene County, Washington, and Wolftown projects, with a total of 61 homes, will be completed within the next few weeks. The Flint Hill and Elkton tracts cannot be opened until December. Flint Hill, biggest of the settlements, will have 40 homes.

The seven communities "ring" an area of the national park large enough to give Homesteads Manager James S. Wills a regular inspection trip of 125 miles—if he skirts the boundaries of them all while on a visit from Elkton, where the central offices will remain.

Ninety days will be required to move all 175 families, according to Wills, who declared "nothing will be rushed" and that some delay may be occasioned by crops yet to be gathered by the mountaineers.

The farms on which the mountain folks will be settled fall in two classifications: Part-time and full-time. A part-time farm, Wills said, averages 20 acres in size—of which about 10 acres will be used for crops, 3 will be in pasture and 7 in woodland. A full-time farm, on the other hand, has an average of 50 acres within its bounds—of which about 40 acres will be used for crops and 10 will remain in woods and pasture.

U. S. to Find Jobs.

"The full-time farmers should be able to make a full-time living on the land which is being allotted to them. The part-time farmers will have to have jobs elsewhere to piece out their incomes," Wills declared.

The Farm Security Administration—which inherited the projects from Resettlement—will try to assist the families in finding work outside the communities, but has no definite plans for starting industries of its own.

"We may consider starting up some small industries later on," the manager said.

Although resentment of the mountain settlers a few years ago flared high against the Government which sought to move them from homes held for generations, much of this animosity has disappeared.

The better-to-do families have moved out of the area "under their own steam" and found homes elsewhere, and the others have been "worn down" by the lean years which the park thrust upon them.

Families are eager to move into the new homesteads today, Wills said, for two reasons. They want to better their living conditions and they want to get their children into schools.

Schools are now available to about 10 per cent of the 306 families left in the national park area. Some of the children have not been to school in four years, and most of them for two years.

Living conditions have grown steadily worse during that time. No new land could be cleared for cultivation. No wood could be cut and sold. No animals could be killed for skins and meat.

Some of the families who hope to be resettled have fled from the dreary mountainsides and are living temporarily in small towns along the park edges.

With exception of a few "squatters," all park inhabitants received some pay for the homes they are giving up—even if no deeds could be located. According to Wills, some of the families still have part of this money and will use it starting over in the resettlements. Others will come in on a "zero basis," he said.

For the first year—or perhaps two—the farms will be leased. After that the farmers will be expected to buy them on terms made as lenient as possible and at prices comparable to other prices in the area. Appraisers yesterday endeavored to set a fair price for the leases which will be signed by the first settlers.

Fred Seal and Raymond Seal, cousins, are typical of the "part-time farmers" who will settle in Ida Valley. They will have a four-room house and approximately eight acres each. Their rent will be $5 per month, they said yesterday.

Rehabilitation loans will be available to families needing to buy furniture and household furnishings, livestock needed and farm equipment.

The full-time farms will have a horse or two each. Every family will have a cow, chickens and some pigs.

If the Seals are typical, most of these things will have to be purchased. The Raymond Seals have three hogs, no cow, and "about seven" chickens. Some of Mrs. Seals' furniture belonged to her great-great-grandmother, but there is not an over-abundance of it. The Fred Seals, however, have less furniture to move and no "live things" of any description. Mrs. Fred Seals, however, has 200 cans of fruit to take along and Seals has several sacks of Irish potatoes.

The new homes in the Shenandoah Homesteads are not "model" in the sense that the homes at Greenbbelt are modern. Only two of the settlements are wired for electricity and none of them has electric lights installed. When they are made available will depend on the ability of the farmers to pay for them. That looks to be a long way off.

The biggest innovation in the new homes will be the bathrooms, of which there is one for each unit.

Architecturally, the new homes make one wonder. Homes in Ida Valley have but one door. It opens off the concrete porch, but whether it is a front or back door is a question. It leads into the kitchen, which has a sink and a wood (or coal) range stove. However much he may not wish it, visitors enter by the kitchen door—and leave the same way. The other rooms are small and the whole atmosphere is "more cramped" than in the smallest mountain shack. The floors have no cracks, however, and the walls are of stained natural wood. They are much better structurally than the homes being left, but—as Manager Wills said—are "just plain houses not intended as models."

Excess Competition in Sports Called Crime Drive Weakness

Overemphasis on competitive sport and the exaltation of star players is one weakness of recreational programs as factors in crime prevention, Weaver W. Pangburn told the third meeting of the Crime Clinic in the Wardman Park Theater last night. Pangburn spoke as representative of the National Recreational Association.

He said there were social values in competition that must be recognized, but went on to observe:

"If we are constantly catering to the more competent, the dubs—who are the ones we most need to reach—must be counted out."

Here Pangburn cited statistics gathered in penal institutions, which showed that few of the prisoners had had much experience in athletics.

He said that school leaders and recreational leaders have begun to recognize the dangers of excessive competition, and are attempting to tone down interschool and interplayground rivalries.

A still greater weakness, according to Pangburn, is the lack of what he called "co-recreation," or the mingling of sexes in recreational activities during the middle and later adolescent periods, between 14 and 20 years. Co-education in the classroom, he declared, "does not provide the opportunity for give-and-take that comes during a recreational situation." Many marital difficulties, he said, are traceable to the lack of this kind of education.

Other shortcomings of present-day recreational systems are the lack of facilities in the congested centers of most great cities, the inability of boys' clubs and similar institutions to extend their influence beyond their own walls and so reach delinquents and predelinquents, and lack of attention to the necessity for family recreation, he said.

At next Tuesday's session of the Crime Clinic the speaker will be Dr. John E. Bentley, of the department of education and psychology of American University. His subject will be "The Problem Child." The clinic is being conducted by the Institute of Criminal Science.

D. C. Woman Given 2 Years for Arson

Mrs. Mary Williams, 42-year-old Washington woman, was sentenced to two years in Virginia State Penitentiary yesterday when she pleaded guilty to two charges of arson in Alexandria Corporation Court. She admitted two attempts to destroy a residence on Mount Vernon avenue in Alexandria, of which she is part owner, in an effort to collect insurance.

She told Judge William P. Woolls that on May 18 and May 27 she and Robert Kimes, alias Robert de Haven, of near Bealtimore, failed in both attempts when blazes they had set were extinguished by the Alexandria Fire Department. Kimes is serving a sentence at Richmond, having been convicted at last term of court.

Minimum Pay Order for D.C. Is Postponed

3-Hour Board Meeting Fails to Obtain Ruling on Women.

Members of the District Minimum Wage Conference agreed last night to postpone fixing a minimum wage for women retail employes to some future meeting, following a three-hour closed session in the District Building.

Their decision was reached after an appeal that the employers' group be allowed to submit new evidence, prepared by Dr. Paul Nystrom, professor at Columbia University in New York City. Copies of Dr. Nystrom's material will be sent to conference members today. He will testify at their next meeting Monday.

John J. Esch, chairman of the conference, said no effort had been made last night to reach a compromise wage figure between the employers' weekly budget of $14.57, and the employes' estimate of $21.51. He said several more meetings might be held before decision on the minimum wage could be reached.

Earlier in the day the District Commissioners announced that John H. Hanna, employers' representative on the Minimum Wage Board and spokesman for the employers in the conference, had submitted his resignation from the board, to take effect as soon as the minimum wage in the retail trade is fixed.

Hanna, who is chairman of the board of the Capital Transit Co., indicated that his decision to leave was due to failing health and the long hours required in investigating living conditions.

3 Holdups Net $59 and a Pint; Nye Son Robbed

Three holdups in Washington last night netted six colored men and one white man a total of $59 cash and a pint of whisky.

Benny Cohen, a proprietor of a grocery store at 1001 First street southwest, told police he was held at the point of a pistol by two colored men and robbed of $10.

Roy Van Pely reported a gas station he operates at 2715 Pennsylvania northwest was held up by two colored men and a white man who got $30 in cash and sped off in a 1937 model sedan.

Bernard Mizel, of a liquor store at 2000 Eighteth street northwest, reported he was held up by two colored men while making a delivery at 1731 S street northwest. They got, he said, $19 cash and a pint of whisky.

Windsors Invited To Luncheon Here By Women Writers

The Duke and Duchess of Windsor have been invited to attend a luncheon of the Women's National Press Club on their stay in Washington, and the Duchess has been asked to be the club's honor guest at its stunt party the first week in March.

Should the couple choose November 23 to be guests of the newspaper women, they said they believed John L. Lewis, who is scheduled to address the club that day, may be induced to select another time.

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—The Society of Virginia Women in New York extended to the Duchess of Windsor by cable tonight not only the promise of a warm welcome when she arrives in this country with her royal husband next month, but an active membership in their exclusive organization.

Landon Urges Placing a Curb Upon Roosevelt

relief and labor policies. In contrast he had warm praise for Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, whom he credited with the "sound insurance policy" on which New York State's insurance laws are built and others are modeled.

Leadership Reasserted.

Landon apparently made the speech as the medium to reassert his leadership of the Republican Party, a leadership which some of his followers have inferred was being taken over by former President Herbert Hoover, who has been agitating for an off-year G. O. P. convention to unite the party on a new set of principles. Landon made no reference to the proposal and he is believed to be against it privately.

Speaking from his office on the tenth floor of the National Bank Building in the presence of members of his family and newspaper reporters, Landon explained that he had called the "radio mass meeting" to "suggest ways and means by which we, the minority party, can join in the fight to preserve the republic."

The Wagner labor act, he said, will prove to be "an unworkable, messed-up piece of legislation that will have to be done all over again."

President Roosevelt, he added, adopted a "dangerous" labor policy which failed to protect life or property.

"Men were shot and clubbed," Landon asserted. "And, according to press reports, the President shrugged his shoulders. He said it was a local affair. He said: 'A plague on both their houses,' and went on another vacation."

Gen. Johnson Unconvinced.

By the Associated Press.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, replying by radio to former Gov. Alf M. Landon's speech last night, declared the Kansan's diagnosis of the national scene was "no more convincing than in 1936."

In a characteristic utterance, bristling with picturesque phrases, the former national recovery administrator pleaded for "the middle way" and the restoration of "the New Deal of '32."

Criticizing both "red radicals" and "rabid reactionaries," he said:

"It is a business country, humane, democratic and abreast of the progress of the world. It is a middle-way country and through one great party or the other that way will prevail, not because any politician planned it that way but because we are still a democracy and both political parties and political leaders must still follow and can never in the end either fool or force public opinion."

Mrs. Prichett Died On Way to Putnam

Department of Aeronautics announced it would make a complete survey.

Then bodies of the victims will travel 8 miles by pack train to a wagon road, 18 miles by wagon to Knight, Wyo., and 7 miles by motor to mortuaries at Evanston, Wyo.

The mighty Mainliner, pride of the United Air Lines fleet, was en route from Cheyenne, Wyo., to Salt Lake City Sunday night when it shattered on the granite face of snow-crowned Chalk Peak, 80 miles east of here, at an altitude of 10,000 feet.

Pilot Bob Bergesen, member of a large aerial searching party, sighted the wrecked craft yesterday, 14 hours after the plane made its last radio report.

Another pilot, Ralph Johnson, after an all-night climb, was the first today to reach the crumpled plane from the ground and to determine definitely that all its occupants were dead.

"The front part of the plane had been burned as though gasoline tanks had exploded when the ship struck," he said.

"Several of the bodies apparently shot out through the nose of the ship, and some of them were buried in deep snow."

M. G. Wenger, postal inspector, said only one bag of mail had been recovered early tonight.

Tree Kills Motorist.

Danville, Ky., Oct. 19 (AP).—Blown over by a strong wind, a large tree crashed down on the cab of a truck near here today, killing the driver, Sidney Robinson, 23, Lexington, Ky., and injuring seriously his companion, Herod Roark, 16, of Danville.

Sen. Copeland Insists Crash Blame Be Fixed

Demanding a complete public report on the crash of the United Air Lines transcontinental plane in which 19 persons were killed, Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, yesterday wired the Bureau of Air Commerce from Cleveland that "no matter where the fault lies, the public is entitled to fullest knowledge of the reason for the latest terrible air crash."

South Trimble, jr., solicitor of the Department of Commerce, said "there will be an open hearing, following which a report will be published, as required by law. Such procedure, he indicated, has always been followed.

Meanwhile, families and friends began preparations for removing bodies of the dead from the mountains near Salt Lake City, Utah, where the crash occurred.

Secretary of Commerce Roper announced the appointment of a board of investigation.

Although declaring funeral arrangements had not been completed, friends of Mrs. Natalie Prichett, one of the victims, said they expected her body to be sent here. Wilson Prichett, of Haverford, Pa., divorced husband of the socially prominent writer, arrived Monday to be with Mrs. Prichett's aunt, Mrs. Sidney Cloman, of the Cordova Apartments. Their son, Wilson Prichett, jr., 17, is a student at St. Alban's School.

Mrs. Prichett left here Friday to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Campbell, in Long Beach, Calif.

Mrs. Charles D. Renouf, 2318 Huidekoper place, whose husband lost his life in the crash, left last night for the home of his parents in Kent, Ohio. Renouf, a former airline official, was en route to California.

The board of investigation is composed of Chairman Miller C. Foster, assistant to Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. Monroe Johnson; Bryan M. Jacobs, chief of the certificate and inspection division, Bureau of Air Commerce, and E. L. Yuravich, chief of foreign airline inspection, Bureau of Air Commerce. The board will be assisted by the following advisory members: W. D. Hammond, chairman of the Utah aeronautics commission, and Preston Peterson, member of the Utah aeronautics commission and the State road commission. Jesse W. Lankford, chief of the accident analysis section, Bureau of Air Commerce, will act as technical adviser.

Borah Lacks Full Information On G. O. P. Parley, Hoover Says

Ex-President Claims Party Poll Indicates Majority Favors Midterm Convention; Reviews Purpose of Extraordinary Session.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 19.—Former President Herbert Hoover said today he did not believe Senator William E. Borah "has been fully informed upon the proposal" made by a group of Republican leaders to call a pre-convention meeting of Republicans.

The Idaho Senator said yesterday: "There would be no better way to stir discord than to start such a convention."

The former President answered in a written statement:

"I do not believe that Senator Borah has been fully informed upon the proposal which has been made by a group of Republican leaders. That proposal was:

"First, that a policy committee of distinguished Republicans should be selected by the national committee in co-operation with Republican leaders; that this policy committee should embrace all shades of Republican opinion; that in the face of this national crisis there were fundamentals upon which most Republicans could agree; that this committee should seek to find this ground of unity; that it should draft a declaration of fundamental convictions; that such a formulation of ideas was the first necessity in a fusion or coalition movement.

"Second, that some time in the spring this draft should be submitted to a general conference of Republican leaders, embracing representatives of Young Republicans, women's organizations, and others.

"The chief emphasis was laid upon the creation of the policy committee in the hope that through it the party could be reoriented to the problems of the times and a solid front, based upon ideas free of personalities, could be presented to the American people."

By the Associated Press.

Indianapolis, Oct. 19.—Opposition to the proposed Republican off-year convention in 1938 was voiced today by former United States Senator James E. Watson with the assertion the party's first objective is to "get possession of the ball."

'Genius' Again Held.

BODY BANKRUPT of ENERGY & VITALITY
OVERDRAWN of ESSENTIAL MINERALS

"Exhaustion of vital minerals in my body did not show like a hole in my suit, but on passing 40 I realized I was not as active as I was at 20. I had tell-tales of early aging, nervousness, dizzy spells, involuntary naps, sluggishness—distressing symptoms that kept warning me something was wrong with my system. I learned that the body in order to function properly must be replenished regularly with essential minerals (not with mushy, devitalized foods). I read about garlic as being a rich source of vital minerals: iron, copper, sulphur, magnesium, phosphorus, calcium, iodine and how these elements help to purify the system . . . prepare the digestive juices for better assimilation of food and build resistance against deficiency ailments. Thanks to D. Gosewisch's Garlic Tablets I can get all the benefits of this important protective food-aid without any of its unpleasant odor or taste. I feel young again."

MILLIONS MORE FOR FINER TOBACCOS!

IS IT GOOD BUSINESS TO BUY COSTLIER TOBACCOS FOR CAMELS?

Camels are the Largest-Selling cigarette in America

Smokers do find something choice . . . something distinctly different . . . in Camels. For the pleasure you get out of a cigarette depends on what's put in it. And in the case of Camels that means finer, costlier tobaccos!

THROUGH the years, Camel has consistently spent millions of dollars more for choice, ripe tobaccos!

That represents a way of doing business that smokers understand and appreciate. Millions of smokers have responded to the appeal of Camel's choice quality. Because of it, Camels have an attraction all their own!

It's a happy experience to have confidence in your cigarette...to know that you are getting the good things out of smoking that you hope for. The plain fact that Camel does spend millions of dollars more for ripe, more costly tobaccos appeals to the common sense of American men and women.

It is good business!

"YOU CAN BET all the 12 years I've been playing ball with the New York Yankees, I've been careful about my nerves. Smoke? Sure! All I want to. My cigarette is Camel," says LOU GEHRIG, Baseball's Iron Man. "With Camels I don't worry about jangled nerves."

"FROM ANY ANGLE, Camel is the cigarette for yours truly. When I'm tired, I light a Camel and back to work I go with a 'lift' in energy," FRANK MULLADY, auto mechanic, says. "I smoke Camels right around the clock. Those Camel tobaccos sure hit home with me."

"FOR YEARS I'VE chosen Camels. Their mild flavor appeals to my sense of delicacy. Even after I've smoked steadily, I notice Camels leave no after-taste," remarks MAXINE HOLLEN, department store saleslgirl. "When I'm all in, I get a 'lift' with a Camel in a jiffy."

"I'VE BEEN a sports reporter for twenty-five years, with plenty of excitement, rush, and hard work packed into each year," says JAMES GOULD. "And for twenty-three of these years—right from the time Camels were first brought out—I've been a steady Camel smoker. Camels don't tire my taste."

"CAMELS are the ideal cigarette for me. As a fashion designer accustomed to spending long night hours creating new styles, I've grown to depend on the mellow companionship Camels give me," says the internationally famous designer, RENEE MONTAGUE.

"EVEN during a strenuous golf schedule, I smoke Camels constantly without a sign of 'nerves.' I guess that the natural mildness of Camel cigarettes has a lot to do with that!" says HELEN HICKS, one of the world's great women golfers.

"I SMOKE Camels from breakfast to bedtime, and my nerves stay serene and unruffled. You see, I don't want to have those irritating little nervous habits," says window display expert, POLLY PETTIT.

"I DUCK, SWORDFISH STEAK, and Boston cream pie—my favorites—aren't the most digestible foods. But I team up with Camels at mealtimes and my digestion does a swell job," says BRUCE WALLIS, college senior.

COSTLIER TOBACCOS IN A MATCHLESS BLEND

Camels are a matchless blend of finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic. The skillful blending of leaf with leaf brings out the full, delicate flavor and mildness of these choice tobaccos. That's why Camels have given more people more pleasure than any other cigarette.

3 More Plays Presented in Drama Contest

Farce Reigns as Fourth Round Is Staged at Roosevelt High.

The fourth round of the preliminary contests in the Community Center's one-act play tournament got under way at Roosevelt High School last night with three more playlets.

Opening the bill was a number based on problems of hen-pecked fathers left to mind their offspring. Presented by the Roosevelt Drama Group, under Margaret Carmody, the play, "Free Wheeling," was written by Dudley Jeskins. Samuel L. Schwartz and Chauncey Davis played their parts well.

"The Hundreth Trick" gave the FBI group an opportunity to display its histrionic ability. Directed by William A. Coleman and Milton Freedman, the drama offers a smashing climax. It should win a place in the finals. The cast included, in addition to Freedman, Fordyce Lyman, Clayton A. Braathen and Alfred J. Francfort.

The concluding playlet was "The Old Trouper." Presented by the Langley Lambs, the drama was directed by M. Forney Reese, who also played the title role. William Draper as the valet Dubbins, was convincing, and Mary Evelyn Fuqua and Paul Taylor played capably in supporting roles.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Columbia Opera Company presents Verdi's "Rigoletto" in the Rialto Theater Tuesday night under the direction of Umberto Mugnai. The cast:

Rigoletto ..... Anthony Meli
Gilda ..... Luise Coronina
Duke of Mantua.. Mario Palermo
Monterone ..... Raul Carrere
Sparafucile .... Philip Whitfield
Maddalena ..... Gretchen Haller

Continuing the week of repertoire in the Rialto Theater, the Columbia Opera Company of New York offered Verdi's "Rigoletto" to an audience which would doubtless have been larger had not rain interfered. Those who did not allow inclement weather to keep them from the enjoyment of musical drama were rewarded with a performance thoroughly routined and well paced.

Anthony Meli essayed the taxing role of the duke's jester and carried it through with convincing verisimilitude. His acting, adapted to the melodramatic character with due restraint upon exaggeration, was particularly effective in the third act, which demands a wide gamut of emotional expression. His voice, which was hollow and unresonant during the opening scene, warmed steadily as the action progressed and attained lyricism in the more tender passages.

Luise Coronina accomplished the fioritura feats of Gilda without strain upon a voice that has agility and clear color. There was now and then a metallic glint in its timbre, but its quality was in general agreeable to the ear. Her technique showed good schooling in the turn of phrases and accurate placement of tone.

Mario Palermo, revealing no vocal weariness after his Turiddu of the previous night, gave a good account of himself as the debonair and fickle duke. "Questa o quella" to "La donna e mobile," he intoned his lines with sonorous fervor.

Philip Whitfield was a capable Sparafucile with a resonant basso that did not fade to inaudibility on the famous low note. Gretchen Haller was a lively Maddalena. The minor roles were filled by Raoul Carrere, Bernard Polande, Rosa d'Amato, Myron Ehrlich, Rita Taft and Joseph Maron.

Seizure Made Here Of Fatal 'Elixer'

in small, one-drug-store towns, the bureau said. He made it clear that the tragic result of using the compound does not necessarily brand sulfanilamide in unadulterated form as unsafe, but rather should impress the public with the importance of taking the drug only by a physician's instruction and prescription.

Campbell said the fatalities are new evidence of the need for tightening the Nation's food and drug laws and predicted legislation to that end will be pressed at the coming session of Congress, in spite of failure to enact loophole plugs in the last few years.

Jury Told 'Woman in Red' Fled After Slaying of Suitor

By the Associated Press.

New Brunswick, N. J., Oct. 19.—The terror of a young woman running away from the scene of the fatal shooting of Paul Reeves, 25-year-old father of two children, was described by State witnesses today at the murder trial of pretty Margaret Drennan, 20-year-old secretarial student.

Several identified her as "the woman in a red coat." One said she called herself "John Drennan's daughter," but none knew her by sight.

Neighbors of the slain man in the little town of Iselin, 15 miles from this county seat, said they were startled by several shots fired within the Reeves' six-room bungalow. They saw the red-coated woman run to the back gate, they said, fail to open it, return to the front yard, trip over a low wire fence, then open the front gate.

A next-door neighbor, Mrs. Marie Sieverts, said she stood outside the gate and held the woman by the arm.

"What hapened?" she said she asked.

"Somethong terrible has hapened. Something awful has happened," was the answer, she asserted.

Her husband, a bald, middle-aged, man, said he ran up the road, caught her and asked her who she was.

"I'm John Drennan's daughter," with the reply, Sieverts said.

Miss Drennan, who wept earlier in the testimony, sat in the courtroom today dry-eyed, pale, outwardly calm.

Her attorney, David I. Stepacoff, told the jury yesterday Miss Drennan appeared at the Reeves' bungalow the night of September 7 because she was pregnant, and "saw no other way out." He said the "simple issue" of the case was that a woman "had the right to kill when resisting rape."

Students End 'Strike' Against Ancient Bus

Beckley, W. Va., Oct. 19 (AP).—The protest of 31 Shady Springs High School students against riding an 8-year-old bus was virtually ended today with 21 riding the vehicle and five others coming to school by other means.

Principal T. F. Bartlett said the students returned of their own accord. They refused to board the bus yesterday as it traversed the 13-mile route on the ground it was dangerous.

Literary Round-up Arranged by Club

A "literary round-up party," at which members and guests have been asked to wear or to carry something to represent the title of a book, will be held by the Professional Writers Club at 3:30 p. m. Saturday at the Y. W. C. A. Building. Miss Marguerite Merigold, president of the League of American Pen Women; Mrs. Helen Orr Watson, author, and Mrs. Elizabeth Ketchum, chairman of the Y. W. C. A. education department, will award a prize for the most original costume idea.

Mrs. Blanche Morgan Foote will be master of ceremonies and the program will include selections by Miss Peggy Worrell, of the Marjorie Webster School; Mrs. Winifred Houghton and Col. Charles G. Ferris. Miss Myrta Ethel Cawood, president of the club, and Mrs. Ketchum will preside at the tea table.

Oyster Industry Ruin Blamed on Mill Waste

By the Associated Press.

Bureau of Fisheries scientists, after an intensive two-year study, have concluded that pulp-mill waste in the York River, in Virginia, is the cause of failure of oysters there to grow and fatten.

The report, drafted by Paul S. Galtsoff, Walter E. Chipman, jr., Arthur D. Halser and James B. Engle, of the bureau staff, reported "elimination of pulp-mill pollution is prerequisite for restoration of the oyster industry in the York River."

I WOULDN'T MIND BEING DRAGGED ALONG ON THIS CLAM BAKE IF THE BEER WERE GOOD AND DRY.
I GUESS THE SMITHS DON'T KNOW BEER TASTES ARE CHANGING OR THEY WOULDN'T SERVE THIS SWEET KIND.

NEXT DAY
OH MARY, EVEN THAT CLAM BAKE WAS A FLOP. WHY, THEY DIDN'T EVEN DRINK ANY BEER TO SPEAK OF.
MAYBE IT WAS THE BEER TOM ALWAYS INSISTS UPON GUNTHER'S. SAYS HE LIKES ITS DRY, BEERY FLAVOR.

DO YOU THINK THAT'S IT? I'LL TRY GUNTHER'S NEXT TIME.
EVERYBODY SEEMS TO LIKE IT AND THE NEW BOTTLE IS SO ATTRACTIVE YOU'LL BE PROUD TO SERVE IT ANYWHERE.

NEXT PARTY
WELL, YOUR WORRIES ARE OVER, MABEL. THIS GUNTHER'S BEER IS MAKING THE PARTY GO BY ITSELF.
AND WHAT A RELIEF TO GIVE A SIMPLE PARTY FOR A CHANGE WITHOUT A LOT OF ELABORATE PLANNING!

ART CRITICS CONSIDER NEW GUNTHER BOTTLES MASTERPIECES OF DESIGN

● Leading art critics in New York and Baltimore have selected the new Gunther's beer designs as the finest they have seen. This seems an especially fitting tribute to pay the largest-selling beer in the Baltimore-Washington market. Because, after all, the finest beer DID deserve a finer package.

Real beer drinkers have long considered Gunther's dry beery beer as fine as the best imported brews. And, as America's beer taste has changed from those sweet concoctions of prohibition to the dry beery beer standards, the switch to Gunther's has been overwhelming. Made after the manner of the finest Bohemian or Pilsner beers, only the choicest ingredients are used. Yet Gunther's costs no more than other beers, because there are no expensive shipping charges included in its price.

If we shipped our beer to Milwaukee or St. Louis, we'd have to charge a premium, too!

Order a case of this dry beery beer and see for yourself how good it is. You'll be proud to serve it to anybody, anywhere, in its new bottle. And you'll never be satisfied with any other beer once you've tasted its dry beery flavor. Gunther Brewing Company, Baltimore, Md.

Workless Work Produces High Salary Checks

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Oct. 19.—The time has come to report again on the progressless progress of our writerless writer friend, who earns $400 a week for not doing anything at all at one of Hollywood's biggest movie studios.

He does earn it, biting his fingernails.

Ninety brief days ago it was that he left his New York newspaper job to sign a three-month contract as a scenario writer, on a salary of $80 a day, with Saturdays and Sundays off.

Hes' also had Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays off, but his paycheck has arrived weekly and regularly. To date he has been paid $4,800 and tomorrow he learns whether his fantastic career in the movies is to continue, or whether it all was a nightmare in the first place.

He went out to his house—a small-sized mansion really—in Beverly Hills today. We had a mint julep as mixed by his chauffeur-houseman. We ate fried chicken as prepared by his cook. We rode in his 12-cylinder limousine, which is equipped with a telephone so he can talk to his driver, and never have we felt sorrier for a fellow human being.

Hasn't Touched Typewriter.

"I haven't touched a typewriter since I've been on the lot," he confessed. "They claim they haven't got anything for me to do, and when I try to suggest something, they say they're too busy to talk to me.

"Some days I haven't reported at the studio at all. I've just stayed home, but nobody has noticed. When I have gone to my office I have sat there reading the newspapers and writing letters.

"Nobody pays any attention, only the cashier. When I came out here they told me I was going to write scenarios. They said that my experiences as a newspaperman in this country and abroad would be valuable.

"They said that they need writers like me. And when I got here I discovered that there were around 100 writers on the staff of my studio and hardly any of them seemed to be doing any work, either.

"Now what's worrying me is that my contract is expiring. All this money I'm making is doing me no good. I'm not enjoying my home, nor my servants, nor my car. They don't seem real. Whether they'll renew my contract is the question.

"I don't know whether I want them to, not if I'm going to spend three more months drawing more money than I ever have before in my life, and doing less to earn it.

Work or the Asylum.

"You can look at my fingernails and see what's wrong. I've gnawed them to the quick. That's all I've had to do.

"What I want to do now is go to work before I go crazy."

If anybody wants to hire a writing man to write, instead of to bite his fingernails, we can put him in touch with our friend—and salary no object. All he wants is work, and he doesn't mean maybe.

While we're on the subject of Hollywood turning minds topsy-turvy, we'd better mention the bruise-beaked woodpeckers of Chico, Calif. These poor birds have clashed with the movies, as produced by the Brothers Warner, and have been vanquished.

The Warners are making "Robin Hood" at Chico, Calif., where they are using the trees for Sherwood Forest. The trees did not have enough low-hanging limbs for Robin Hood and his merry men to swing on, so the technicians made some.

They did it with concrete and when they had finished, their tree limbs looked so real that the innocent woodpeckers went to work thereon, with results disastrous to themselves. These birds banged so many of their beaks against the Warners' fake trees that now they're afraid to start drilling on the real thing.

Ratoff Acts Again In Film Comedy

The volatile, versatile Gregory Ratoff, who recently completed his first solo directorial effort with "Lancer Spy," has been assigned to step before the cameras again as an actor in "Sally, Irene and Mary," pretentious musical on the Twentieth Century-Fox program.

Other stars in the big musical cast are Alice Faye, Fred Allen and Portland Hoffa, Joan Davis and Tony Martin. Ratioff holds one of Hollywood's few four-way contracts calling for his services as an actor, director, writer and producer.

That Sturdy Old Standby, 'The Prisoner of Zenda,' Returns to the Screen in Magnificent New Regalia

David O. Selznick Has Outdone His Every Earlier Spectacle by the Magnitude of His New Picturization of Hope's Enduring Romance; A Correspondent Leaps to the Defense of Yehudi Menuhin.

IT IS inevitable that reliable old wheelhorses of the cinema's scenario library, like "The Prisoner of Zenda," for example, will be marked by new facets of artistry every time they emerge from the dusty shelves to go before the cameras again.

BELL.

This is particularly true of the David O. Selznick picturization of the Anthony Hope romantic melodrama, for release through United Artists and due on the Palace screen Thursday. The quorum of drama desks that sat in on a private preview of this stunning subject yesterday afternoon gasped in admiration of the majestic backgrounds that this old thriller of dual identities and hopeless love has been given. The kingdom presided over by Rudolph V must have been an exceedingly rich one. Its castles sprawl over tremendous vistas of softly tinted magnificence; the coronation scene presents perspectives that seem literally city blocks long and all of the costumes and accoutrements add to the glitter of one of the most pretentious films ever made.

There are other points of distinction to be found in the new "Zenda," too. Instead of being played in a key of tempestuous physical action, it is toned down to the usual level of repression that Ronald Colman maintains in all of his stellar vehicles. The action, needless to say, abounds in conflict between two factions battling for the crown. It would not be "Zenda" if it did not. But during a great deal of the picture's considerable footage the dramatic clashes are psychological rather than violently physical. The most effective of the love scenes between Rassendyll, impersonating his double, the rightful king, and Princess Flavia are played passively in close-up.

This treatment necessarily is abandoned in the dueling scenes. The sword-play between Rassendyll and Rupert of Hentzau is vivid and exciting as they fight their way up the dungeon stairs. This was the play and the scene that established the late James K. Hackett as foremost of the "matinee idols" on the Broadway stage back before the turn of the century. That is how long "The Prisoner of Zenda" has been around in one form or another. Its first screen version was approximately a contemporary of Mme. Sarah Bernhardt's "Queen Elizabeth."

Never has the old favorite been more deftly cast than in its present manifestation. Nothing more than a recitation of those to be seen in prominent roles will be set down here, with the manner of their miming reserved for Saturday morning's review in this space. It should be an earnest of the film's histrionic greatness to any student of the screen to know that the roster of principals embraces, in addition to Ronald Colman, Madeleine Carroll, one of the cameras' reigning beauties; Douglas Fairbanks, jr., who "comes back" with a vengeance as Rupert of Hentzau; Mary Astor, C. Aubrey Smith, Raymond Massey, David Niven, Lawrence Grant, Ian Maclaren, Montagu Love, Evelyn Beresford, Byron Foulger, Howard Lang and Ben Webster.

Perhaps the whole matter may best be summed up in the statement that in "The Prisoner of Zenda," David Selznik has produced a screen spectacle that surpasses even his "David Copperfield," "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and "A Star Is Born" in picturesque pomp and circumstance, photographed with consummate skill by James Wong Howe, Hollywood's eminent Chinese cameraman. If you love beauty, I should say see it as a "must."

The Civic Theater of Washington requests that another reminder be hurled in Washington's teeth that the first-night of the second season of this ambitious organization is scheduled for tonight at 8:30 at the Wardman Park Theater. This will introduce the Civic's new director, F. Cowles Strickland, to the Capital and one of the most competent casts the Civic is able to assemble. The play is "Excursion," never before seen on a local stage. By an unfortunate collision of dates, the Pierce Hall Players also will inaugurate their new season tonight in "Boy Meets Girl," in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest.

The following letter over signature of Frank Ford Burnet, 2000 H street northwest, under date of October 18, speaks for itself:

Dear Mr. Bell: You and I have been getting along well during the past six years of our distant association as writer and reader with a common interest in the motion picture and stage. You may recall that now and then I have written to protest against some of the Bell-wringing of my theory that if the motion picture is to become an art, it must act accordingly and be judged by a stern measure of criticism. The present case of Menuhin is one of these occasions.

Briefly speaking, I think Menuhin is right and Hollywood's paid agents—many of whose opinions are given to the public in the Bell column—wrong, as usual. I don't say that Hollywood hasn't tried to improve, or that music has no place on the screen, but in the present instance the artist's complete integrity as a genius makes him right in refusing to submit to the foolishness of the movie men.

That is to say, Hollywood is not yet ready for the presentation of adult musical art such as that of Menuhin, presented as a complete end in itself and without the "dressing" submitted to by Gigli, Moore, et al. This should be obvious, since no complete opera ever has been filmed, and no occasion has arisen where a concert violinist could be used throughout a film, playing complete compositions; with the expectation that the work would come through untouched. It is no "doubtful compliment" at all that Yehudi has "paid such fellow artists in music's higher realm as Leopold Stokowski," etc. It merely happens that Menuhin's art is different. All the artists you name are singers save two, Stokowski and Janssen. Leaving them out of it, let's consider the singers. Miss Moore, for example. The first Moore effort was nice. But the STORY. Heaven Help Us! Is that anyone's idea of dramatic art, except Hollywood's? And take the little item offered by Gigli, who undoubtedly is the world's supreme tenor. A more sickening, silly mess was never written. Must art endure this, must the public endure it, to hear the Gigli voice and the Menuhin concerti? I say that both would be fools to put up with it.

Which leads us back to where we were, that Hollywood is not ready for the Menuhin type of music. I think, indeed, that steps are being taken in the direction of maturity of the screen art, but they are not advanced to the point where a truly great artist can afford to lend himself to exploitation for the sake of popularity. I think it bespeaks an artistic inntegrity of the highest order that Menuhin has remained true to the highest possible obligation an artist of genius can have—to preserve inviolate his own conscience and his own feeling for the greatest art that man can know.

Very truly yours, (Signed) FRANK FORD BURNET.

I trust Mr. Burnet has not forgotten that the item in this column which aroused his interest had as its first line, "There are, it seems, two sides to every question."

There can be no denying that certain great artists have appeared on the screen in vehicles in no way commensurate with their artistic achievements in other fields. It is no less true that the gradual growth toward maturity, which Mr. Burnet agrees is on the way in the cinema, could not occur without the co-operation of the Stokowskis, Moores, Gigilis and the rest. They lay no claims to perfection in the new medium, but they foresee fine things for it and are willing to contribute to that development by appearing in the films in as artistic a state of development as they have reached to date. A little of this point of view, I think, would not be amiss in Master Menuhin.

In view of the immense number of screen productions that must be released in a year, it is a foregone conclusion that more than a few inferior stories will find their way before the cameras. I would suggest that Mr. Burnet read the libretti of some of the standard grand operas, as dramatic narrative and apart from their majestic musical embellishments, and see if he does not deem many of them as far-fetched, tawdry and lacking in conviction as the blood-and-thunder tales that used to be known as "dime novels."

It will comfort my correspondent, I am sure, to know that Gladys Swarthout gets some overripe tomatoaes thrown at her in her latest film; Lily Pons appears in an abbreviated feather costume in hers and when somebody "on the lot" attempted to tell Grace Moore how to sing, she packed up with Valentin Parrera, her husband, and flew to New York to rejoin the Metropolitan.

Rudolph Paves Way for Disaster

When David O. Selznick brings his superb picturization of "The Prisoner of Zenda" to the screen at Loew's Palace Theater on Thursday, this lusty drinking scene will set the stage for all of the romantic adventures that are to follow. Reproduced above are the pictured likenesses of Ronald Colman, who appears in the dual role of Rudolph and Rassendyll, and that sturdy old war horse, C. Aubrey Smith. Madeleine Carroll plays the role of Princess Flavia.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Oct. 19.—Idol Chatter: According to authentic reports, it is no wonder ranchers near Malibu Lake mistook a movie troupe on location there for picknicking nudists. No one gives more hard cash to charities than Lily Pons—but she refuses to sing without a fat pay check. Their yesterday: About 15 years ago, Warren Hymer, now the screen's toughest "mugg," was an honor student at Yale. Absolute tops in dizzy gifts to screen stars is the gold-plated, jewel-studded telephone sent to Joy Hodges by a titled Frenchman. It is remarkable how few actors can climb the ladder of fame—and still keep their feet on the ground.

LILY PONS

Come to think of it, I have never heard anyone who knows him speak an unkind word about Don Ameche. Best off-screen comedy of the week: Joan Davis' imitation of the Ritz Brothers—wonder if the boys appreciate its cleverness? Odd that German Marlene is more popular than Swedish Greta in Sweden—and that Greta outranks Marleng in Hitlerland. Not insinuating that he is jealous—but Bobby Breen wears a peculiar expression whenever the screen contract landed by his brother, Michael, is mentioned. Gary Cooper becomes almost coherent when you talk about hunting and fishing.

NEVER SEE John Barrymore escorting his Elaine without wanting the orchestra to play that old favorite, "When a Man's Got a Woman." Anyone looking for trouble can find it by asking Fred MacMurray why women find him so fascinating. No love lost: Simone Simon—and the rest of the employes at Twentieth-Century Fox. Not more than a dozen stars can muster real tears for the cameras, the others cry with the aid of a glycerin bottle.

Paramount is very proud of its brigade of talent scouts. Working out of New York, those eagle-eyed gentlemen are combing the highways and byways for star prospects. They haunt the "Little" theaters along the New England Coast, travel miles to see a college play and suffer through home-town dramas in the hope of seeing a face which should be immortalized in celluloid. And today I met the secretary of one of Paramount's executives. She is remarkably beautiful and she has a burning ambition to be a screen star. This winter she is going to New York to try her luck on the stage. "I haven't a chance in Hollywood," she said. "The producers leave the scouting to their professional scouts—and the scouts never visit Hollywood because they think the producers should find anyone who is already here."

Had lunch with Barbara Stanwyck, who seasoned her edibles with a chuckle every time she thought of an unusual fan letter written her by a tailor in Horse Caves, Ky. The letter, which arrived in this morning's mail, reads: If you will arrange for me to see a studio when I come to Hollywood this fall, and will send me a large autographed picture of yourself, I will place same in my window, located in the heart of the business district of this town and which many people pass daily. It will make fine advertising for you and will make you many friends here in Horse Caves." Barbara sent the picture—and she sent the tailor's letter to her publicity man as an object lesson in high-powered salesmanship.

You will never see him on the screen but, in Hollywood, Bhogwan Singh is a very important personage—a talented specialist, who commands the admiration of the greatest stars. Whenever an Oriental picture is made, Bhogwan steps into the limelight and the cash, for he is the official turban-wrapper of the industry. His creations are not only pictorial, but authentic—every wrinkle has a significance all its own. And if ever you have tried to swathe your head in an Afghan turban, you will understand why the stars who have played Eastern potentates gladly pay tribute to Bhogwan Singh.

Wide Sleeves Hit For Screen Star

The height of luxury for evening wear is accomplished in the blue fox wrap glimpsed on Loretta Young, star in "Second Honeymoon," these nights. This is a full-length, fitted coat with wide sleeves that flare at the elbow and a wide boat-shaped collar that flatters the face. Loretta wears it over a brown tulle frock made over pale blue satin.

Changes Mind.

Walter Pidgeon, who affirmed he would never sing again in the movies, has a song to do in "The Four Marys".

The lads arrived while the team was practicing. The ball players spied the insignias, broke up their huddle and emitted loud cheers for "The Gang-Busters"—the rival radio program!

'Dime Per' Tax On Studio Slang

It is a "slang fund."

Every time anyone utters a slang word in her presence, he is taxed a dime, which is put in a coin bank. The idea was suggested by her English coach, who found that her apt pupil was absorbing slang along with the fundamentals of the English language.

The Viennese actress, making her screen debut in "The Las: Gangster," is turning the proceeds over to charity and it won't be a small amount, either, she declares.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

What Can Be Done for Anemic Schoolgirl Whose Case Has Been Called Incurable?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a little niece in junior high school who has been anemic since birth. Doctors have given her up, saying nothing can be done. She doesn't have any blood; they say her blood is just the same as water. If she cuts her hand or leg it is almost impossible to get it healed. She is very weak and pale.

* * * *

I want to know if there is a place in Washington—or anywhere—to which she could be sent for free treatment, as it is impossible for the family to pay much, if anything. I do hope you can help me. I feel there must be some way—some doctor—to help this little girl gain some strength. I'll be looking for your answer in The Post. B. I. W.

* * * *

DEAR B. I. W.: I have talked over your problem with a member of the medical profession in whose judgment I have implicit confidence. He says the field of medicine today is an ever-changing field of remarkably consoling new discoveries; that new and effective curatives for immemorial and supposedly incurable chronic ailments are continuously being brought to light. And he believes you have good reason to hope that whoever has said your niece cannot be helped to a long lifetime of adequate health may have spoken too hastily.

* * * *

This doctor suggests you have the girl diagnosed and treated by the clinic at Gallinger Hospital—whose supervisory staff is made up of some of the finest diagnosticians, surgeons and specialists in every line of the medical fraternity in Washington. These professional men make a volunteer offering of their services—for humanitarian reasons and in the interest of the advancement of medicine—and patients treated by the clinic are not required to pay one cent.

* * * *

Have the parent of the child get in touch with Dr. R. F. Tobin, at 901 H street northwest, who is head of the admittance bureau of Gallinger Hospital. Dr. Tobin, I am told, will review the history of the child's case in detail; may assign a doctor to see the child in her home; and if it develops that hospitalization is needed, will see that she gets hospitalization. M. H.

Wants Friends for Mother.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Would you kindly advise me through your column whether you know of any women's clubs or organizations which would enable my mother to find friends. She is accustomed to a small town and lots of friends but at present she is staying with me and as I am a young girl in Government service, I don't find much time to spend at home with her.

My mother is middle aged and a widow and my friends are all much too young to interest her. She is very lonely living in a small apartment and I shall greatly appreciate any suggestions for occupying her time. Yours truly. MARY M.

A Source of Help.

DEAR MARY M.: I can think of no better source of information on this subject that Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, president of the Women's City Club of Washington and one of the past presidents of the District Federation of Women's Clubs. Your mother can be assured of a sympathetic and cordial reception by Mrs. Wiley into the Women's City Club—should she be interested in joining—and Mrs. Wiley can tell her, also, of other clubs in the city which might answer the purpose you have in mind for her.

* * * *

Mrs. Wiley can be reached by telephoning her home, North 8621, at 2345 Ashmead place northwest. The Women's City Club, over which she currently presides, has a clubhouse at 736 Jackson place, bordering Lafayette Park. Just now, this club is offering educational courses of study, including languages; a class in rhythmic dancing is opening up ("I'm 60 myself, but I'm going to take it—it's good for the health," said Mrs. Wiley in speaking about it) and there is a busy program of social activities for weekdays and Sundays. M. H.

Advice for "M. T."

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Tell "M. T." (your correspondent of Saturday, October 16) that she had better throw out her bait for another man. She was the lady, you may remember, who wrote to ask you whether or not she should "wait" for a man 3,000 miles away who hasn't communicated with her in any manner since he told her good-bye several months ago and left on a business mission. Yes, I know he had told her he loved her. But I went through a very similar experience. The suspense of waiting—and not hearing—nearly killed me. I couldn't eat or sleep. Finally I telephoned 3,000 miles, frantically burning up the wires trying to locate my beloved (whom I thought loved me). I found his residence telephone had been temporarily disconnected. I placed the call to his office. Finally, the operator informed me that "Mr. and Mrs. X are expected back from vacation tomorrow. Do you wish the call kept in?"

It sometimes helps to hear other folks' troubles—so won't you please print this in your column for the benefit of poor, trusting "M. T?" Sincerely. MARY JANE.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Best Egg Recipe To Receive Award In Post's Contest

Have you sent in your recipe for eggs? Our favorite recipe contest this week invites these recipes. Only three more days are left in which to enter the contest.

Any dish featuring eggs is eligible for a prize. We are sure that egg dishes are popular in your home. New recipes for using them are always in demand. If you have a recipe for special omelet, a new way to vary the trite creamed eggs on toast, or a special egg dish that has been handed down in your family, then you should enter it in the contest. Foreign recipes such as sukiyake with special vegetable filling and egg foo young are also suggestions. Winning recipes will be carefully tested before being published.

Write your recipe clearly, giving exact directions for preparation. Include your name and address and mail your recipe to Jean Green, Post Food Editor, before October 23.

Taffeta in an Evening Gown of 1900 Influence

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

THE taffeta evening gown above, available in American beauty, Shoreham blue and black, was one of 50 distinctive models from the Hecht Co., shown at the fifth annual Washington beauty and style show, at the Raleigh Hotel, last night. Costumes for daytime and evening, featuring the season's new fabrics— designs from America and Paris—were paraded by mannequins, in a gala presentation. Outstanding were simple frocks of sheer wool trimmed with suede in contrasting color; Schiaparelli's sweater dress of silver lame; dinner dresses topped with glittering jackets; afternoon dresses of rich metal materials. The show concluded with a wedding ensemble, the bride attired in a dress of white velvet, made along lines of classic simplicity. Coiffures, created by guest hair stylists from New York, were in harmony with the costume designs. The fashion revue was under the direction of Gail, New York fashion authority.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Oct. 19.

AS YOU may have found in this daily chore, the phrase, "cafe society" is one of this town's pet descriptives. It means those socialites, either of the blood or money brand, who take their evening fun where the lights are bright and the music either swingy or waltzy.

ALICE HUGHES

Even "cafe society" falls into two groups—the grander and more elegant of which has its headquarters at the Fifth Avenue Inn, run by Mr. Vincent Astor. This is the top-notch classy crowd, and its real haunt is the Iridium Room at Vince's place, which was just flung open for the season a few nights ago. Vince was on deck, and so was his missus, who ran the opening as a benefit for her pet charity, the Musicians' Emergency Fund. The band was Maestro Emil Coleman's, as is the tradition at this joint—to any other orchestra I doubt that those gorgeously pedicured tootsies could even twitch. Oh, it was all so glorious, so ultra, so thu-rilling, so dull that I slunk into an iridium corner and made a little vulgar noise, I fear!

All our youth and chivalry were gathered there—well, practically all. At least all that mattered. To whom? Themselves and the reporters. All the prize beauties were on tap—Eleanor Young, prize deb of '36, and the former Dorothy Fell, now a very young matron. Doris Duke Cromwell, slim as ever in a scarlet crepe dress with elbow sleeves. Conde Nast and Frazer Jelke were among the older beaux. Oh, it was all too, too wonderful—with Prince Serge Obolensky, Astor's former brother-in-law, running the show. That's his regular job there.

Well, we opened the Iridium Room! But give me a good old barn dance!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Somebody saw Winthrop Rockefeller smiling warmly upon Movie Actress Mary Brian at a dance palace the other evening and started one of those silly romance rumors. Pooh! They ought to know that John D's family has old-fashioned conservative marriage ideas, even if Dad is in the saloon and theater rackets now!

* * * *

Speaking of the Rockefellers, their Rainbow Room is now "formal" again for the winter—so dress or don't bother to come. The place went dress-up the night Sheila Barrett opened her fall engagement there. In the last two years this Texas girl, via Washington, has become the pet entertainer of the "cafe set"—sharing that lucrative honor with Dwight Fiske.

* * * *

I just hear that an old style we have always liked is hot again this year—those cut-steel shoe buckles which cover the whole instep and give the feet a very dressed-up look. Smart again, and very, so out with the buckles!

* * * *

Time for that front-page line—only umpty-dump shopping days till Christmas, or maybe I shouldn't have brought it up.

* * * *

The spangles and sequins continue to range among the fancier dressers this fall—but a counter-offensive has just been launched by a firm famous for its simple tailored clothes. Aghast at the current gaudiness in evening clothes, this house just ran big newspaper ads headed, "Don't let the Paris exposition or any other influence upset your good taste!" Take that, you sequins!

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Ringworm Treatment.

WITH THE RETURN of the fall season, the population in gymnasiums is increasing, and the old problem of what is called "athlete's foot" again is a matter of important consideration.

There are many misconceptions about athlete's foot, one of the most prominent being that it is exclusively confined to athletes. The common name generally used by doctors for it is "ringworm," and here, again, there is some confusion, because it is not due to a worm and does not always form in rings.

It is caused by a vegetable fungus known as trichophytin, which gets into the superficial layers of the skin and causes an eruption, which may go through several stages. The commonest form is an acute eruption of blisters which itch and which occur on the soles of the feet. Very common also are the chronic forms which occur in between the toes in the form of a red, weeping eruption. Either of these, especially if excessively scratched, may become infected from the nails with a secondary pus infection.

Chronic forms include a scaly, eczematous type on the upper surface of the foot and the toes. Many of these eruptions are what is known as "ids" and are not due to the presence of the fungus itself, but are areas of eruption made hypersensitive from the original focus of infection.

Treatment will vary with all types, and no single method of treatment will be successful in all cases because there are many forms of the fungus, and all varieties are not killed by the same agent. Salicylic acid, sulphur, thymol and iodine are the most beneficial drugs. X-ray treatment probably is more valuable than any of them as a routine. Even so, the condition may be very chronic and recurrent.

The standard medicament is Whitfield's ointment, the active ingredient of which is salicylic acid with benzoic acid in an ointment base. Application of this ointment will relieve the majority of acute cases.

When secondary pus infection has occurred, this must be taken care of by antiseptic lotions, hot applications and soothing applications before an attempt to kill the fungus is made. A weak solution of potassium permanganate as a foot wash is often valuable in such cases.

It will be readily seen that the condition is not as simple as it appears, and in most cases requires expert advice and treatment, rather than home treatment and amateur remedies.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of The Washington Post. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Pompons as Color Notes.

Paris (AP).—Original color ideas Lelong launches this season include fluffy silk pompons to trim evening frocks. These dangle in a variety of shades on tulle and lace skirts. Colors mix also in a red, blue, yellow and green striped belt which accents a black dress.

Matrons of 50 Urged to Avoid Flashy Clothes

"THE BEST WAY to camouflage age," says Orry-Kelly, Warner Brothers' designer, "is to dress up to it. A middle-aged woman will look more youthful if she doesn't contrast her age with clothes designed for someone much younger.

"Taboos for middle-aged women are mad hats, slacks, flashing color, multicolored jewelry, extremely high heels, novelty hose, full skirts and sports clothes too jauntily cut.

"What I would certainly recommend for the wardrobe of the woman over 50 is the best clothes she can possibly afford, straight lines and dark or grayed colors.

"A dress for important afternoon occasions might be a fitted silk crepe such as we recently saw Mrs. James Gleason wear. Of very deep wine shade, it had long sleeves, high neckline, fitted bodice and slightly flared skirt. Her jewelry consisted of an attractive gold dog collar.

"The most slenderizing coats are the straight-cut ones. The flatter furs, such as mink, caracul or beaver, are becoming trim.

"Brimmed hats are generally better than the small ones. Rich felts with colorful feathers are ideal. Big envelope bags, shoes cut high in front and pull-on gloves are good in suede because they seem designed primarily for the older women."

Experiments Show Report of Fast-Burning Fat to Be Erroneous.

By Ida Jean Kain.

WE ARE fascinated by every new development in diet, particularly if it is rumored to have anything to do with reducing. That is why the experiments in which fats were tagged with heavy hydrogen, to trace their chemical change in the body, received such widespread attention.

These experiments, conducted by Dr. Harold Clayton Urey and Dr. Rudolph Schoenheimer of the Columbia University School of Medicine, showed that certain fats are burned more rapidly than others. The experiments did not show one kind of food fat to be less fattening than another, as hundreds of overweight women hopefully assumed. Dr. Schoenheimer was besieged with requests for more information about the particular kind of fat which would be converted into energy rather than weight.

When such erroneous reports are broadcast, not only is the scientific value of the experiment misrepresented, but false hope is held out to the public.

Dr. Schoenheimer states that the tagging of atoms with heavy hydrogen in the experiments has no application to dietetics. As far as weight is concerned, it is immaterial whether fat burns fast or slow. While the rapidly burning fats are being utilized other foods are stored.

Carbohydrates (sugars and starches) burn much faster in the body than ordinary fats, but the fast-burning foods only spare the burning of the other compounds. You can gain weight by eating large amounts of either slow or fast burning foods. For example, you might think that since alcohol calories are not stored they cannot affect weight. Alcohol, which burns in the body almost as rapidly as in the flame, can indirectly influence weight. When you drink alcohol it is rapidly converted into energy, but while it burns you do not draw on any other material for energy. The other food elements which have been spared by the burning of alcohol are stored as fat.

The heavy hydrogen experiment is an invaluable contribution to scientific research on many unknown chemical processes. However, from the standpoint of nutrition, food chemistry is the same as it has always been. The calorie difference between your food intake and your energy output is the main factor in weight. All body fat represents an excess of calories, whether in fat, protein or carbohydrate, whether burned slowly or rapidly in the body.

It's excess food that makes fat.

Finnish Legation Honors Former Foreign Chief

H. J. Procope Is Guest at Tea Given by the Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt; Mme. Anja Ignitius Gives Violin Recital.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor

While rain splashed continuously at the windowpanes of the Finnish Legation in Tracy place yesterday afternoon, a group of guests sat cozily inside listening to a fair-haired young woman play the violin.

She was Mme. Anja Ignitius, Finnish musician, who had chosen for her brief program three numbers by Finnish composers—including Sibelius' "Mazurka." Her playing was an unexpected treat for the men and women who had come to the tea given by the Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt in honor of Hjalmar Johan Procope, former Minister of Foreign Affairs of Finland.

HOPE R. MILLER

So far as that goes, however, Mr. Procope himself was a pleasant surprise. Young—far younger than the average distinguished foreign statesmen who visit here—and as handsome as anyone who has been here in ever so long, he is also a superior conversationalist along lines far removed from either politics or economy.

As he talked gayly now with one guest, now with another, it was easy to understand why, during the years he represented Finland at the League of Nations, the press frequently referred to him as "the handsomest man in the council." But his claim to fame rests not on that score, but rather on his long line of accomplishments regarding the situation in northern Europe in the last decade.

Whether all the guests who talked to him over the teacups yesterday realized he was one time minister of commerce, twice minister of foreign affairs, and later a member of the League of Nations Council (of which he eventually was made president) is a matter of question; but certainly all seemed to enjoy meeting him or, having met him on some of his former visits to Washington, were happy to see him again.

This Visit "Purely Private."

In Washington for only a brief visit, he will leave today for New York. This trip to America he described as a "purely private one," whereas a number he has made in the past were in connection with state affairs.

Mme. Ignitius will be in Washington for several days, and may be joined here later by her husband who is now in New York.

Yesterday's host and hostess—one of the most popular couples in the diplomatic corps—greeted their guests in the drawing room. Wearing a trim black satin frock that contrasted nicely with her blonde hair, Mme. Jarnefelt was even more attractive than usual as she introduced her honor guests, mingled with the others, and directed them to the drawing room where cocktails could be had or to the dining room where coffee, tea, paper-thin sandwiches and cakes were served.

Assisting at the tea table were Mme. Prochnik, wife of the Austrian Minister; Mme. Rajamaitri, wife of the Siamese Minister, and Mrs. Emil Hurja. As if by common consent, all three wore black frocks and veiled hats.

Lady Lindsay Early Arrival.

Among the early arrivals was Lady Lindsay, whose semitailored frock of brown crepe was worn with a hat to match, pulled low over her silver hair; the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter, and Mr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel, the former of whom played the piano accompaniments for Mme. Ignitius and announced her selections.

Others glimpsed as the party progressed were Mrs. Francis Bowes Sayre in a floor-length velvet frock with gold accents at the throat and wrists; Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, who recently returned from a summer's vacation at Cape Cod and were busy greeting friends on all sides; the Ambassador of Mexico chatting with Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wilber; the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, who patiently explained that the Countess Potock who recently arrived in New York was not his wife, but his cousin. The former is expected back in Washington next month.

Among others there were the Turkish Ambassador, Mehmet Munir Ertegun; Emil Hurja, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton, the Secretary of the Yugoslav Legation and Mme. Perazic, who had to leave early as they were entertaining at a dinner party last evening; the Minister of Norway and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, the Minister of Denmark, Otto Wadsted, and the Counselor of the Soviet Embassy, Constantine A. Oumansky.

Russians to Aid China Orphans

Funds From D. C. Benefit to Be Sent Institution in Shanghai.

For a number of years the large colony of Russians in Washington have sponsored a benefit event to aid the children of Russians both in this country and abroad who are desperately in need of assistance. Called the Russian Child's Day Program, this event is arranged so that funds raised from it may be distributed to different groups for clothing, food and education.

This season, just as the local Russian welfare organization was laying plans for a big musicale and dance to be held at the Washington Club Friday evening, October 29, Mme. Wsevolod Joukowsky, vice president of the group, received a letter from the Bishop of the Russian Church in Shanghai, China, who graphically described the terrible conditions there and told how the Russian orphanage was filled to its capacity even before the more terrifying raids began there.

In view of having received this letter, the organization voted that this year Russians, of the pre-Soviet days, who are now making their homes in Washington, will donate every penny they raise to help the orphanage in Shanghai, where the need seems the greatest of all.

Mrs. J. J. Mack, president of the Russian Welfare Group, in arranging the benefit is assisted by Mrs. Joukowsky, V. A. Grodsky, Mrs. A. I. Krynitsky—all of whom are officers of the organizations—and the following general committee:

Mrs. Vladimir Ayvazoglou, Mrs. N. P. Shaffer, Mrs. Vladimir Grodsky, Mrs. Paul Galtsoff, Mrs. J. C. K. De Veyher, Mrs. D. B. McAuley, Mr. and Mrs. George N. Belicovitch, John Stafford and Alexis Bukovsky.

Mrs. Charles C. Cawson, who is traveling through Virginia with friends from Ohio, will sail from Baltimore shortly after her return here for Jacksonville, Fla. She will visit friends in Lakeland and Tampa and then spend the winter in St. Petersburg.

Signora Rosso Feted At Luncheon Given By Diplomat's Wife

Mme. Prochnik, wife of the Austrian Minister, entertained at a luncheon yesterday for Signora Augusto Rosso, wife of the Italian Ambassador to the Soviet. There were 12 guests.

The Minister and Mme. Prochnik will leave Saturday for Philadelphia, where they will attend, "An Evening in Vienna," to be given that evening by the Philadelphia Arts Club. They will stay with the president of the club, returning to Washington on Monday.

Career Women Meet in Social Interlude

Harris & Ewing

At noon yesterday—or thereabouts—two women in two highly different but equally interesting walks of life sat down for a note-comparing chat. They were Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, of the State Department in whose capable hands rests much of the responsibility for decorating United States embassies and legations in foreign lands, and Miss Susan Ertz, the well-known writer, in whose capable pen rests much of the responsibility for decorating our bookish hours with first-rate reading. Miss Ertz is the guest of honor at a tea to be given today by her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Coleridge Ertz, at their apartment, 3220 Connecticut avenue. Mrs. Robbins and Miss Ertz met each other at a luncheon yesterday at the Women's National Press Club.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

AS BEFITS the wedding of the daughter of a former Ambassador to a scion of a family included in Ward McAllister's original list of the 400, the marriage on Saturday of Miss Gertrude Laughlin to Lieut. Hubert Chanler is being preceded by a number of important parties. The bride-to-be is the daughter of our former envoy to Spain and Mrs. Irwin Laughlin, and her fiance is the son of Mrs. Winthrop Chanler, author of "Autumn in the Valley," "Roman Spring" and other distinguished books, and the late Mr. Chanler.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Mr. and Mrs. Laughlin will give a dinner for the bridal party on Friday evening following a rehearsal at St. Paul's Church, and Lieut. Chanler is holding his bachelor dinner tomorrow evening at the Metropolitan Club.

Last night the Sulgrave Club was the scene of a gay dinner when Miss Stellita Stapleton entertained in honor of the couple. Earlier in the day Miss Carlina Sheridan, who will be a bridesmaid, gave a cocktail party for them at the Massachusetts avenue home of her grandmother, Mrs. Philip H. Sheridan. A dinner by another bridesmaid, Miss Helen Davis, on Monday evening, and a dinner given for Lieut. Chanler by Chauncey Parker on Sunday evening were other festivities for the pair.

Tonight Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss are entertaining at a dinner dance for the attractive Miss Laughlin and her fiance at their magnificent home, Dumbarton Oaks, in Georgetown.

THE FIRST MEMBER of Capital society to visit war-swept Spain will be Mrs. Alfons Landa, of 2101 Connecticut avenue. She is sailing the last of the month with a Spanish newspaper friend and the two will join Generalissimo Franco to observe conditions from his side. Mrs. Landa hopes to write several articles about her experiences in that tragic country.

She is the daughter of former Representative and Mrs. Frank Mondell and a sister of Mrs. Mondell Gregg, of Washington.

A PRECEDENT is being set by Countess Laszlo Szechenyi, who has decided to remain at the Breakers, her Newport home, until December 1. Her residence on Ochre Point, considered by many the finest home in America, is one of the few equipped with a heating system. This is the first time however, that the Breakers will have been kept open so late.

Newport enjoyed a longer season than usual this year, perhaps because the rather staid atmosphere which characterizes this Rhode Island resort has in the last year given way to one of more informality. Roller skating parties, instead of white tie dinners, enlivened the last few weeks there.

Countess Szechenyi's sister, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, will open her Newport villa next season, for the first time in ten years. Mrs. Whitney paid a brief visit to Washington earlier in the week and was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Charles S. Payson, the former Joan Whitney.

Countess Szechenyi is, of course, wife of the former Hungarian Minister to this country. Her home on Massachusetts avenue is occupied this winter by the German Ambassador and Frau Dieckoff.

* * * *

FRAU THOMSEN, wife of the Counselor of the German Embassy, is considering a quick trip to Hungary while her husband is out on the West Coast. She usually goes there every autumn to visit friends . . . Titian-haired Mrs. Gifford Pinchot was in town yesterday for a brief stay. She and former Gov. Pinchot will remain in Milford, Pa., a few weeks longer before opening their home here.

Watsons to Quit Capital Tonight

Rear Admiral Adolphus E. Watson has been transferred to duty on the West Coast, and with Mrs. Watson will leave Washington this evening.

They gave up their house on Ashmead place several days ago and have been staying with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander C. Liggett, at 1920 Twenty-third street. Mrs. Liggett is the former Miss Priscilla Watson.

Mrs. V. B. Breckenridge, of Sweet Briar, Va., is again in town for a visit and she is stopping at the Wardman Park Hotel.

British Attache Host To Canadian Colonel

Col. H. D. G. Crerar, of Ottawa, a high official of the Canadian Department of National Defense, and Mrs. Crerar, who are at the Shoreham while in Washington on leave, were guests for whom Col. Wyndham Torr, Military Attache of the British Embassy, and Mrs. Torr entertained at cocktails in their apartment at the Shoreham yesterday afternoon.

Col. and Mrs. Torr also had a small company of luncheon guests at the hotel Monday to meet the visitors.

Senator Barkley Goes to New Home On Return to U. S.

Senator Alben W. Barkley, majority leader, who returned with his daughter, Mrs. Max Truitt, from a summer in Italy, no sooner stepped down the gangplank of the Rex in New York last Thursday than he was off and away to Paducah, Ky., where Mrs. Barkley was waiting to tell him all about the new house.

The name of the place which they have taken just outside of Paducah is Angles and it is Mrs. Barkley's pride. She has been supervising its "renovation" all summer. The Barkleys do not expect to return to Washington much before the extra session of Congress, which convenes November 15.

Mrs. Truitt now is in Washington with her husband. David Barkley, son of Senator and Mrs. Barkley, had such a busy desk at his office at the Department of Commerce this summer that he was not able to get out of town for even the shortest vacation.

Preston Markhams To Live in Virginia

Now on a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Preston D. Markham, whose marriage took place Sunday afternoon, will make their home at 5105 Columbia pike, Arlington, Va.

The bride was the former Miss Nellie P. Bowen, daughter of Mrs. J. Louis Ferber. Mr. Markham is the son of Mrs. L. B Markham, of Arlington, Va. The wedding, which took place at the home of the bride, was performed by the Rev. C. S. Abbott.

Given in marriage by her stepfather, J. Louis Ferber, the bride wore a royal blue dress with navy blue accessories. Her flowers were talisman rosebuds. Mrs. Joseph C. Rowen was her matron or honor. The best man was Leland Markham.

Returns From New York.

Mrs. Clara Isabel Boone has returned to her studio apartment here after several weeks spent in New York during the recent Paris openings which she attended. While in New York she stayed at the Barbizon-Plaza, and also for part of the time was a guest of Miss Marjorie Hamill.

Anne Andrews To Wed Oct. 30

Miss Anne Ridgely Andrews, niece of Eugene duPont, of Owl's Nest, Wilmington, Del., and a cousin of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., the former Miss Ethel duPont, has completed arrangements for her wedding which will take place October 30 in Christ Protestant Episcopal Church, Christiana Hundred, near Wilmington. She will wed John Sharpless McIntyre, of Hobby Horse Farm, Hollins, Va., and Cleveland, Ohio.

Miss Andrews is the daughter daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James N. Andrews, of Somerset, Va., and Aiken, S. C. Mr. McIntyre is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. McIntyre.

Miss Andrews' attendants will be Mrs. Coleman Walker, matron of honor, and her sister; Mrs. Alfred E. Bissell, Mrs. Charles Howell, jr., Mrs. Kermit Birchfield and Miss Eleanor Perry. Merle Shirey will serve as best man.

* * * *

Miss Margaret Campbell Geddes, daughter of the former British Ambassador to the United States and Lady Auckland Geddes, will be married to S. Gr. H. Prinz Ludwig von Hessen und bej Rhein at a ceremony which takes place October 23 at St. Peter's Church, London.

Following the ceremony, there will be a large reception at the Curzon Square home of Sir Auckland and Lady Geddes.

Miss Geddes, not only has an American background through the fact of her family's residence here in Washington, but also even more closely through the fact that her mother was a daughter of the late William A. Ross, of Staten Island.

Her fiance is the son of the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess von Hesse und bei Rhein of Darmstadt and is a great grandson of Queen Victoria.

* * * *

Mr. and Mrs. Edson P. Pfohl, of Niagara Falls, N. Y., who are in Washington for a few days' visit, are occupying a suite at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Hull 'Good Will' Canadian Trip To Be Marked by Social Events

Dinners Scheduled With Governor General and Premier; Ottawa and Toronto Both on Itinerary; Mrs. Wright Home From Cuba.

The "good will" trip to Canada of Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull which began yesterday will have its many social moments as is evidenced by the dinners already planned in their honor with Governor General and Lady Tweedsmuir and Prime Minister Mackenzie King. Both Ottawa and Toronto are on the Hulls' itinerary.

It is very likely that Mrs. Hull, who always travels with her husband and who even accompanies him when he meets foreign dignitaries as they arrive in Union Station on visits to Washington, will bring back some interesting souvenirs of her Northern trip. In the "workroom" of her apartment at the Carlton Hotel, among 50 framed informal pictures there, she has one of herself in animated conversation with the former Prime Minister, Ramsay MacDonald. Other mementoes of foreign spots are an ash tray from Mexico, a Bolivian silver cigarette box and an agate elephant from Uruguay.

So it's pretty definite that Mrs. Hull will bring something home from Canada to "remember them by."

They expect to arrive in Ottawa today around noon. Leaving on a Thursday night train, they will reach Toronto the next morning. After the Secretary's address at the University of Toronto that night he and Mrs. Hull will board a train to bring them back to Washington.

This week's visit to Canada marks the first extended out-of-town holiday for Secretary and Mrs. Hull after a long summer marked by its lack of vacations.

* * * *

School days bring old friends back to Washington from all over the world. Mrs. J. Butler Wright, wife of the American Ambassador to Cuba, is the most recent to return for the purpose of placing her younger daughter, Miss Edith Wright, in the Fermata School in Aiken, S. C.

With Mrs. Wright is her sister-in-law, Mrs. Louis Bacon, of Boston. They are at the Anchorage.

Informal parties are being planned and given for them everywhere by friends who remember them from their own school days as Miss Harriet and Miss Mary Southerland. Mrs. James F. Curtis entertained for them at dinner Monday night at the 1925 F Street Club.

Miss Mary Wright, Mrs. Wright's elder daughter, remained in Cuba with her father. When Mrs. Wright returns to Cuba, Mrs. Bacon will go with her for an indefinite stay.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Harral Milliken have closed their camp on Lake Champlain and opened their house in town for the winter.

* * *

With them will be their daughters, Miss Eleanor Milliken, who returned recently from Italy, and Miss Ruth T. Milliken, who spent part of the summer in the North.

Dr. Pedro Fraga Is Ranking Guest At Connor Dinner

The Ambassador of Cuba, Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, was ranking guest at a dinner given by Mrs. Samuel Connor last evening at the Mayflower. The party later went to the theater.

In the company were the Secretary of the Yugoslav Legation and Mme. Perazic, Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Giron-Cerna, Mr. and Mrs. Newton Brewer, Mrs. Reginald Mead, Miss Evelyn Gordon, Kenneth Watson and Frank Morse.

This evening the Ambassador will be guest of honor at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Nikola Perazio at Villa Rosa, their home on Massachusetts avenue.

* * * *

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Bourne, who spent the summer at their country place in South River, Md., have opened their apartment at the Roosevelt Hotel for the winter.

* * * *

Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Edward O'Keefe, of Charleston, S. C., have taken an apartment at the Fairfax for the winter season.

* * * *

Announce Marriage.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Rollin Stickney, jr., on May 15. Mrs. Stickney before her wedding was Miss Lena L. Geesa, of Washington and Long Island. Mr. and Mrs. Stickney now reside at 1432 Madison street northwest.

Norway Envoy To Honor Koht

Foreign Minister Guest at Reception Here October 30.

The Norwegian Minister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne have issued invitations to a reception on Saturday, October 30, from 5 to 7, in honor of the Foreign Minister of Norway, Dr. Halvdan Koht.

Among other parties planned for him is one to be given by Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, soon after she and the Secretary return from their trip to Canada.

Dr. Koht, who is en route to this country on the liner Stavangerfjord, is expected to dock October 26 in New York. He will stay at the Norwegian Legation while here.

One of the most noted historians in Europe, as well as an outstanding statesman, Dr. Koht was formerly a lecturer in history and later a professor at the University of Oslo.

F STREET AT FOURTEENTH

Duperreys Center of Social Events in Washington.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The significance of "Rotary" has been a social whirl for the president of Rotary International, Maurice Duperrey, and Mme. Duperrey, of Paris, since their arrival in the Capital yesterday morning. The first event in honor of Mme. Duperrey was a luncheon at the French Embassy and later in the afternoon she and M. Duperrey were both honored at a reception given by Robert B. Swope, president of the Washington Club, and Mrs. Swope, at their home in Chevy Chase. Today Mme. Duperrey will again be guest of honor at a luncheon for wives of Rotarians—the "Rotary Anns"—at the Congressional Country Club.

Despite the downpour yesterday afternoon, cars came and went steadily between the hours of 5 and 7 as members of the Washington Rotary Club and other guests, several from the Diplomatic Corps, arrived to pay their respects to the visitors from France. The regional president of oRtary, Albert L. Rowland, of Shippensburg, Pa., and Mrs. Rowland, also were in the receiving line.

There was the genial spirit characteristic of Rotary, in the gathering. "Rotary Anns" who had not seen each other since the summer holidays, exchanged greetings, and the Bill and Sam, Mary and Jane with which friends welcomed each other contributed an atmosphere of informality uncommon at so large a gathering.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. George W. Harris and their daughter Arlene, at whose home M. and Mme. Duperrey are being entertained during their stay in Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Harris and their daughter were among the Washington Rotarians who attended the international convention in Nice last summer at which M. Duperrey was elected to head the organization. Others in the party which went to France who were present to enjoy a little reunion yesterday were Richard Lamb, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur May and Mrs. Ethel L. Ward.

Among those assisting at the tea table were Miss Marcia Swope, daughter of the hosts; Miss Christine Horn, Mrs. A. F. E. Horn, Mrs. A. P. Reeves, Mrs. Joseph K. Moyer, Mrs. Roland Whitehorst and Mrs. Harrison E. Howe.

The tea table was in the dining room and the guests were received in the living room, which was decorated with a profusion of yellow chrysanthemums and palms. Mrs. Swope wore a gown of black velvet with a necklace of pearls and a corsage of orchids. Mme. Duperrey's costume was of dubonnet lace over a print of dubonnet and white, with which she wore a matching beret and slippers, as well as orchids of the same shade. Mrs. Rowland wore a black sheer gown trimmed in a braided pattern, and her corsage also was of orchids.

Among the guests from the Diplomatic Corps were the Ambassador of Turkey, Mehmet Munir Ertegun; the Ambassador of China, Dr. C. T. Wang, and his daughter, Miss Yoeh Wang; the Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Hurban; the First Secretary of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. Babes; the First Secretary of the French Embassy, Roger Gaucheron, and his sister, Mlle. Gaucheron, and the Attache and Mme. Lucet.

Among others present were Roland Robbins and Mrs. Robbins, who is a native of France; Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Demonet, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Lum, Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Merrill, Dr. and Mrs. David E. Buckingham, Dr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Christie, Mr. and Mrs. Frank D. Leetch, Dr. and Mrs. Harrison E. Howe, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Prescott, Mr. and Mrs. John Poole, Dr. and Mrs. William C. Van Vleck, Mr. and Mrs. James D. Yochum, Mr. and Mrs. William J. McNamara, Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. MacKenzie, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert J. Rich, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Summers, Mr. and Mrs. James B. Nolan, Frank H. Jellen, Mr. and Mrs. Bryant A. Hewins, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Groom, Mr. and Mrs. George M. Whitwell, Dr. and Mrs. Chester D. Swope and the Rev. and Mrs. Albert Lucas.

Return From Peru.

Homer Brett, United States Consul General for Peru, and Mrs. Brett, have returned to this country and have taken an apartment at the Fairfax.

Society Gives Benefit Party

A benefit card party was given on the sun porch of the Wardman Park Hotel yesterday afternoon by the Rector's Aid of St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, with nearly 200 members and guests present. Although there was no sun to lend brightness to the setting, it was a cheery party and the players came early and stayed late.

Miss Eleanor Fitts, vice president of the aid, of which the rector, Dr. Herbert Scott Smith, is president, was general chairman of arrangements for the affair. Assisting her were Miss Caroline Smith, sister of the rector, who had charge of the sale of candy; Mrs. John V. White, Mrs. J. A. G. Pennington, Mrs. E. Fitzhugh Schapter, Mrs. Elmer Oliver, Mrs. Lawrence Gourley and Mrs. Herman Lee.

The aid has five active circles, all of which co-operated in yesterday's party. Chairmen of the circles included Mrs. Joseph Wall, Miss Smith, Mrs. Willoughby Chesley, Mrs. Donald MacLeod and Mrs. A. D. Newman. Prizes at each table were little rose vases.

The aid holds monthly meetings at which the rector presides, followed by a luncheon and program with a guest speaker. Mrs. C. W. Nickless is secretary and Miss Helen Mulliken treasurer.

Mrs. William Cuthbert Harrison, who has returned from New York for the winter, and was a guest yesterday, will talk on Virginia gardens at one of the meetings of the aid in the near future.

Mrs. Bealer Hostess To Highlands Women

Mrs. Pierre M. Bealer will be hostess this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at a meeting of the Woman's Club of Sixteenth Street Highlands at her home, 1424 Longfellow street. She has arranged for Mrs. Harry Claflin to present a program and roll call will be answered with current events.

Mrs. Elmon L. Burton is president of the club, which is limited to a membership of 25 and is now in its twenty-third year. Its meetings are at the homes of members on the first and third Wednesdays of each month.

MRS. JAMES J. DAVIS, wife of the Senator, heads the Woman's Welsh Club again this year. She and all of the officers of the past season—the club's first—were re-elected Monday night at a meeting at her home. The others are Miss Rhode Watkins and Miss Katherine Williams, vice-presidents; Mrs. Erbin G. Thomas, financial secretary; Mrs. John Staack, recording secretary; Mrs. Katheryn Reese, treasurer; Mrs. Irvin L. Clark, in charge of publicity; Miss Pearl Griffith, pianist, and Miss Florence Harries, chaplin.

Miss Griffith is not only pianist but chairman of program for the meetings and, needless to say with a Welsh group, there is always fine singing included.

The club, which now has 40 members, is the youngest of the organizations in the association of Welsh Women's Clubs throughout the country, whose purpose is to support the Home for Aged Welsh at Rocky River, Ohio.

Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, of Baltimore, candidate for first vice president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, will address the Athenaeum in Kansas City, Mo., today. When officers of the club learned she was to be in the city, the program was rearranged so as to make it possible for the members to hear her. The Athenaeum is particularly interested in her as a candidate on the general federation list, as it will be hostess to clubs of the Nation next spring when they go to Kansas City for their biennial convention where the elections take place. Mrs. James A. Landrigan, of Kansas City, is president of the Athenaeum, which is one of the foremost women's clubs of the Middle West.

THE CHEVERLY WOMAN'S CLUB, of which Mrs. Betty Tayman is president, will be addressed by Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley, of Chevy Chase, president of the Maryland federation, tonight at the celebration of its eighteenth anniversary. The birthday meeting will be in Cheverly School.

Next Tuesday Mrs. Hoadley is scheduled to speak at a meeting of the Bethesda Club.

The Montgomery Federation of Women's Clubs held a board meeting yesterday at the clubhouse of the Bethesda Woman's Club. The morning was devoted to business, with Mrs. George W. Morey, the president, presiding, and the afternoon to a program on public welfare in which the club takes an active interest.

So the District is not the only place where women are engaged in club work, although it might appear so from the number of busy organizations in the Capital.

Over in Arlington, Mrs. E. O. Pollock is entertaining the Department of the American Home of the Woman's Club of Arlington at luncheon tomorrow afternoon and Mrs. Helen Engleking will address the members on "The Mechanics of Style."

The district (not District of Columbia) meeting of the Women's Clubs of Virginia was held yesterday at Luray and was attended by a group from Arlington including Mrs. H. Wilson Petty, president of the club; Mrs. J. B. Lowell, Mrs. E. C. Miles, Mrs. Frank Bailey, Mrs. Robert Mahoney, Mrs. Julian Tapp, Mrs. Frank Flack and Mrs. St. John Perrote.

The fall meeting of the Arlington County Tuberculosis Association at the Clarendon Health Center October 28 will be addressed by Miss Sula Fleeman, the State representative.

P.-T. A. Leaders Hear Haycock

"You as parents and we as teachers should aim to know the whole child," Assistant Superintendent of Schools Haycock told a large group of local Parent-Teacher Association presidents yesterday morning at a meeting in the board room of the N. E. A. building.

Haycock outlined his ideas of the functions of parent-teacher associations and asserted that anything which affected community life had a direct appeal to such groups.

Mrs. Walter B. Fry, president of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, presided at the meeting of local presidents which lasted through the day and was attended by representatives of almost 60 associations. Various phases of work done by the parent-teacher organizations were outlined by State chairmen and in the afternoon Birch Bayh, in charge of physical education in the public schools, was the speaker.

The congress at present is working to insure the success of the parent-teacher institute which is to be held at George Washington University, November 9 and 10, closing with a dinner meeting at Barker Hall, Y. W. C. A. building. Among the speakers who will conduct the institute are Mrs. J. K. Pettingill, president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers; Miss Frances Hayes, education secretary of the congress; Dr. Mitchell Dreese of the psychology department of the university; Miss Ellen C. Lombard, of the Federal Office of Education, and Dr. Willard C. Beatty, of the Office of Indian Affairs, Department of the Interior.

Writer Talks To Shoppers' Group Here

Leane Zugamith Explains Function of Consumer Organizations.

Leane Zugsmith, novelist who uses her literary talent to present the cause of the underpaid worker, yesterday was here from New York in the capacity of an officer of the League of Women Shoppers, to address the Washington organization at its meeting in the A. A. U. clubhouse.

There are two primary reasons why the league is attracting prominent women to its membership, she told her audience. The first is that citizens who do not want articles made in sweatshops by men and women who are underpaid or by children, find it a means of "making a dent in delinquent employers' labor policy" which they could not influence by individual action. The league, she explained serves as a fact-finding body and takes action when an impartial survey shows unfairness to the worker.

The second reason for belonging to it, she said, is that, in some industrial sections, with the growth of the labor movement and passage of progressive legislation, it has been discovered vigilante groups have been formed at the instigation of employers. They have been designated as citizens' committees, she said, but do not serve fairly the workers' interests. The league offers the opportunity these citizens seek to be of service, she believes.

The league issues neither a black nor a white list, as this method of procedure has been found impractical, said Miss Zugsmith. The members, however, do join in a boycott on goods manufactured under unwholesome conditions and have taken their place in picket lines with union strikers. Miss Zugsmith herself has picketed on several occasions.

About 60 women attended yesterday's meeting. Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler Colman, of Alexandria, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler, is president of the Washington league; Mrs. Marquis Childs, vice president; Mrs. Charles Wood Collier, secretary, and Mrs. Bernard A. Gould, treasurer.

*X WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1937 19

This Morning

At the Free Lunch for Overgrown Kids.

By Shirley Povich.

The private life of an oyster was thoroughly exhumed and the boys in the back room at Harvey's also acquitted themselves nicely in a scrimmage with the shrimp creole and chicken a la Mexican. It was the weekly luncheon of the Washington Football Writers Association yesterday with Mr. Gawge P. Marshall picking up the tab from force of habit.

POVICH.

Mr. Marshall is not a football writer but he knows how football should be written, especially when the boys are writing about his Redskins. But that is beside the point. The point is that, under the influence of Marshall's munificence, tongues were loosened and the boys let their hair down.

* * * *

It seems pretty incredible but it was a sworn fact around the premises that when Coach Frank Dobson, of Maryland, walked across the field to greet Coach Frank Murray, of Virginia, after Maryland's 3-0 victory at Charlottesville last Saturday, that Dobson found himself shaking hands with himself. The Virginia coach turned his back on Dobson. You hear about such delightful little incidents at these luncheons.

* * * *

You hear, too, about the football player who was, as the saying goes, "out on his feet." Dutch Bergman, C. U.'s coach, who told the story, swears it's true. For want of a better player or a better team to hang the story on, Bergman let it stand as an incident that took place in the C. U.-Western Maryland game of four years ago.

* * * *

Bill Shepherd was Dick Harlow's ace in the Western Maryland backfield and despite the fact that the score was only 2-0 against C. U., the line-battering Shepherd was giving Bergman's team an awful time of it. He was smashing the C. U. line to bits, backing up the line on the defense and generally playing a whale of a game.

* * * *

But in the fourth quarter, Harlow, from the Western Maryland bench, began to notice that Shepherd was acting strangely. The fellow's play lapsed into the mechanical. Once he lined up in the C. U. backfield, another time he wandered 30 yards before he could find his own position. Harlow, realizing that Shepherd had been taking an awful physical beating, called time, rushed out on the field, and sought to learn if Shepherd still retained his mental faculties.

* * * *

"What town is this, Bill!' Harlow shouted.

Shepherd wearily scratched his head, then blurted out "Washington."

"What team are you playing out there?" Harlow next asked.

* * * *

Shepherd looked blankly at his coach for a moment, then suddenly bethought himself. "I know, coach. It's C. U." he answered correctly.

But Harlow seemingly was not yet satisfied. He had one more question.

* * * *

"What day is today, Bill? Tell me."

Once more the punch-drunk Shepherd had to think. Then he smiled. "You can't fool me, Coach. I know what day it is. It's pay day."

* * * *

* * * *

It was a dead heat between Bergman's story and too-good-to-be-true tale of Hairbreadth Harry Costello, who presides at these football writers' feasts where the boys order up without regard to the figures in the right-hand column of the menu.

* * * *

To hear Costello tell it there was a chap named Doc Lucas from a small town in Michigan who thought that the sun rose, set and dissolved in Notre Dame's football team. Lucas had the wherewithal to travel and none of Notre Dame's football trips to either coast were too long for him. One particular Saturday found Lucas in Yankee Stadium with $1,000 to bet on Notre Dame against Yale.

* * * *

Lucas had also guarded against the possibility of snake-bite and had already consumed most of a quart of his favorite antitoxin when he took his seat beside a chap who was proudly wearing a white sweater with a huge blue "Y" on his chest. Lucas, whose little world had been comprised mostly of Kalamazoo, Niles and other small Michigan towns, took one squinty look at the guy with the "Y" and remarked:

* * * *

"So you're from Ypsilanti, hic, 's nice to be among friends."

His neighbor haughtily informed Lucas that he was from Yale—not Ypsilanti. Whereupon Lucas tried to make something of it, winding up by offering to bet a grand that Notre Dame was more popular in New York than Yale.

* * * *

They argued the point until dusk with the stadium long since empty and nobody about to settle their wager. As they left the place, still arguing, they encountered Hairbreadth Harry, who had officiated in the game.

* * * *

Lucas and his Yale friend, who

Race Steward Resigns Job With O'Hara

Director Refuses Quinn's Demand That He, Too, Leave Post.

By the Associated Press.

Providence, R. I., Oct. 19.—The second running of the $50,000 New England Futurity, scheduled for Saturday at Narragansett race track, was canceled tonight as a reduced force of National Guardsmen, acting under orders of Gov. Robert E. Quinn, continued to block the track's opening.

Racing Secretary Pat Horgan earlier had announced entries would be received for tomorrow's regular racing card.

O'Hara Won't Quit.

Meanwhile, Managing Director Walter E. O'Hara, who, backed by a Supreme Court decision, defied Gov. Quinn's demand that he resign, conferred with his attorneys, but gave no clue as to his next course of action.

A reduction in the corps of Guardsmen on duty was announced shortly after cancellation of the big race.

In curtailing the riot squads from 300 officers and men to four officers and 65 men, Adjutant General Herbert R. Dean said he felt a provisional battery would be sufficient to enforce martial law in the area.

As the Guardsmen, with fixed bayonets, paced in front of the spacious race plant today in a drizzling rain, a denunciation of their presence came from Attorney Raymond J. McMahon, track counsel. Lieut.-Gov. Raymond E. Jordan defended Quinn's proclamation that a "state of insurrection existed."

Jordan Backs Governor.

McMahon declared the "martial law proclamation was political, personal and illegal, and that no insurrection existed as the Goverrnor proclaimed."

Asserting he was 100 per cent back of the Governor, Jordan expressed the belief the State racing law would be "overwhelmingly repudiated" if placed on the ballot in the next election.

The New England Futurity was to have been a race for 2-year-olds over 1 mile and 70 yards. Track Publicity Director William Ames said the event had a gross value of $53,000.

Earlier Director O'Hara announced acceptance of the resignation of Racing Steward Tom Thorp. He said Thorp resigned because his engagements at Rockingham and Narragansett Park conflicted.

C. U. Eleven Drills for St. Louis in Gym

Catholic University's football squad spent another day within the protecting confines of a gymnasium yesterday, but that doesn't mean they took it easy. If anything "Dutch" Bergman drove his boys a trifle hard to atone for the handicap of indoor work.

The Cardinals spent the best part of the afternoon looking over St. Louis plays, as demonstrated by Eddie La Fond's freshman eleven in dummy scrimmage. The Billikins' big threat is, it appears, one Woody Herrmany a hard-hitting fullback who has been outstanding in every game thus far. The player representing him was marked for future reference, as Mr. Hermany will be Saturday.

Bergman also had a blackboard drill, during which he outlined the key plays which will be employed in the game. St. Louis has scouted the Cards thoroughly, regarding it as its big game of the season, hence the need for fresh strategy. The Brookland squad departs for the scene of battle tomorrow afternoon, arriving Friday in time for a workout in Edward J. Walsh Memorial Stadium.

Lorraine Gulli Takes Women's Pin Honors

Lorraine Gulli stole the show last night as the Washington Ladies League bowlers held forth at the Arcadia alleys. Miss Gulli took high game with 142 and high set with 344.

The Columbians captured high team game with 538; V. Veebs annexed high team set with 1,481.

In the Columbian Heights Men's League Arthur Darling established a season record by shooting a high game of 170. Little Tavern took high team set laurels with 637; Bill Wolfe won high individual set with a total of 396 and Hessick Coal Co. set a seasonal mark with a high team set of 1,481.

Merchants Want Game.

The Silver Springs Merchants are seeking a Sunday football game with a fast 150-pound or unlimited eleven. Call Shepherd 4360 between 3 and 4 p. m.

Brother and Sister to Rassle On Same Program Thursday

The first brother-sister act in the history of local wrestling will be unfolded tomorrow night at Turner's Arena, with Clara Mortensen, world feminine title claimant, and her brother-trainer, Leo, appearing on the same card.

After watching Brother Lee in a workout yesterday, Promoter Joe Turner booked the California youngster for a 30-minute supporting bout with Gene Bowman, a newcomer from Texas.

Miss Mortensen appears in the feature battle against Marie Gardini, of Chicago. It will be two out of three falls, with Miss Mortensen risking her crown. Miss Mortensen has been in town since Monday, and was introduced at the Kiddies' Free Luncheon Card fights, having received a terrific hand.

Promoter Turner completed his card yesterday. For the headline men's battle, Dynamite Joe Cox meets Cliff Olsen in what smacks of being a grudge match. Olsen has an old score to settle with Cox.

In a four-round bout Chief Thunderbird meets Jack Hader, and in 30-minute battles Karl Davis engages Walter Podolak and Hans Steinke meets Jake Patterson.

'Sleepy Joe' Kilgrow, Alabama's Multiple-Threat Man, Is Causing a Lot of Worry Among G. W.'s Coaching Staff

By Lewis F. Atchison.

They call him "Sleepy Joe," "Sleepy Joe" Kilgrow, but the George Washington coaching staff unanimously agrees that somebody made a mistake. Either they got the wrong man, or the wrong name. It's probably the latter, but you can judge for yourself Saturday at Griffith Stadium when George Washington tangles with Alabama, for "Sleepy Joe" Kilgrow is an infor "Sleepy Joe" Kilgrow is more than a ripple in the Tide ball-carrying department.

Every year since he took over the reins at Alabama Coach Frank Thomas has been giving the All-America selectors at least one candidate, sometimes two, and on occasions even three and four—to think about. This year he's got them on the trail of "Sleepy Joe," the boy who requires 12 hours napping in every 24 to feel right.

From an unreliable source it has been learned that the Colonial coaches are scheming to see that Kilgrow doesn't get the proper amount of rest before he goes against their boys. Lack of sleep is reported to be the only thing that can stop him. Tennessee and all of the Tide's previous opponents failed and while the downtown board of strategy isn't selling its men short, it isn't underestimating Mr. Kilgrow's ability.

Can Do Everything.

A meeting of Messrs. Pixlee, Reinhart, Koch and Moynihan, all of whom have seen Kilgrow perform, sounds like a "yea men's" convention. Can he run the ball? Yes. Can he pass? Emphatically yes. Can he kick? Yes, although he isn't the team's regular punter. Can he block, tackle and think? You bet he can, and he does all of his chores in a manner that is enough to discourage the coach of any prospective opponent.

"Sleepy Joe" is the team's leading ground-gainer at this early date, averaging more than 7 yards a try. His passing is one of Alabama's most potent offensive weapons, and his defensive play has been the talk of the cotton belt. Last year he carried the ball 137 times for a net gain of 609 yards. He tossed 22 passes and made good on 50 per cent for gains totaling 244 yards. Four of them were good for touchdowns. My friends, that's passing.

Holm Means Trouble.

He did some punting and hung up a 38.4 average, which isn't the world's worst, and managed to lead the team in scoring with a total of 52 points. The figures may give you some inkling as to "Sleepy Joe's" true worth. Saturday he'll give the Colonials a personal demonstration, starting at 2:30 o'clock.

Pixlee also is worried considerably about Charley Holm, the Alabama fullback, who does the punting.

"Against Tennessee," he said, "this Holm kicked them outside when his team was deep in its own territory, making it impossible to return the ball. When in Tennessee's territory he kicked a high ball that absolutely didn't roll or bounce 5 feet after hitting the ground. It may have been luck, but it was uncanny. He never missed. The same brand of punting against us this week certainly will be a tremendous advantage for Alabama."

Georgetown Prep Loses Two Regulars

Tom Graham, clever quarterback, and Joe Crowley, fine defensive guard, are lost for at least two weeks, it was disclosed last night. Graham suffered a twisted knee, while Crowley may have a broken rib.

As neither of the injured will be available for the game with St. Alban's this week, Coah Ed Hargaden must find immediate replacements for these key players. Hugh Schroder and Henry Briess are being groomed to fill Crowley's position, and either Charley Desshene or Stuart Fritz will fill in for Graham.

Harber Leads Hitters.

Keyser, W. Va., Oct. 19—Pounding 27 hits in 68 trips to the plate, Gilbert Harber was the Keyser firemen's leading swatsmith for the 1937 season with a .397 average. Although Harry Hoffman turned in a .529 mark, he was at bat only 36 times.

Three Ripples in Tide Attack Headed This Way

Inter-American Horse Show Will Lure Large Entry List

Over 400 Horses Will Compete in 4-Day Event Opening Tomorrow at Meadowbrook Grounds.

Ninety of the greatest horses that have ever shown in the Capital will appear in action at the Inter-American Horse Show during the four days of this colorful international event, scheduled to open tomorrow afternoon at the Meadowbrook Show Grounds in Rock Creek Park, Md., promptly at 1:45.

Listed in the names of the Belgian and United States armies, local breeders and hunt clubs, the entry list of approximately 400 is perhaps the most representative ever assembled south of New York for a meet of this kind.

The military teams will hold the spotlight during the exhibition, but civilian exhibitors showing their mounts in the hunter and jumper classes, will complete a well-rounded program of events.

Crack Belgian Jumpers.

The United States Army horse show team, Capt. Milo H. Matteson, captain, 14 horses, including those who showed at Olympia, London, last May, and at Aachen Germany, in August. The Belgian officers, who arrived last week, are entering 8 of their crack jumpers.

Capt. Isaac L. Kitts, Fort Myer, will give daily exhibitions of dressage on his famous Olympic dressage mare, American Lady. An added feature, one that should prove a great drawing card, is the daily exhibition of fox hounds. Tomorrow Dr. W. T. McClellan and Reed Thomas, joint members of the Fairfax Hunt, will show their pack; Friday, the Middleburg pack, D. C. Sands, master; Saturday, the Rodland Hunt, Tom Mott, master, and Sunday, Dr. Fred R. Sanderson master, will show the riding and hunt pack.

Jumping Competition.

In the interstate civilian three-day jumping competition, representative horses from Maryland, Virginia and the District will compete for the Governors' Trophy, presented by horse lovers from these States. All horses entered must have won a ribbon in a show recognized by the American Horse Show Association. Such limitation assures a quality show, the aim of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, president of the Inter-American Horse Show Association, and Maj. Frank L. Whittaker, manager.

Final selection of three teams was announced by show officials today: Virginia—Scanty Annie, W. B. Cassilear, Winchester; Moth Ball, Hubbard Phipps, Winchester; Nip, Mrs. John Hay Whitney, Upperville; Brandonia, Frances Crouse, Arlington Hall, Maryland; Black Caddy, Fred Hughes, jr.; Recall and Hunger Marcher, Charles Carrico; Apple Jack, Fenton M. Fadeley, jr. District of Columbia — Rocksie, Margaret Cotter; Bean Beetle and Bonny, Betty Couzens; Cypress de Beau, Mrs. Eleanor Patterson.

Lieut. Col. John Millikin, Third Cavalry, Fort Myer, and Dr. Fred R. Sanderson, M. F. H., Riding and Hunt Club, will judge the interstate team jumping event and jumpers. Col. Wyndham W. T. Torr, military attache of the British Embassy, and Maj. Henry Leonard, U. S. M. C., will judge the hunters.

Ingram to Get Starting Berth In Navy's Game With the Irish

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 19.—The Navy team practiced in the rain this afternoon as it began its preparations for the contest with Notre Dame, at South Bend next Saturday.

Bill Ingram took part in the scrimmage, and is booked to start against Notre Dame Saturday, rather than Lem Cooke, outstanding Navy back in the Harvard game. Cooke, however, according to Head Coach Hardwick, is sure to get in much of the playing. Another back who will be used to a large extent is Emmett Wood.

Against Notre Dame, Ingram will be playing in his home State, as will Bob Antrim and Charley Reimann, while Frank Case, the fourth member picked to start Saturday, is from the adjoining State of Illinois.

At present, Hardwick intends to start the same line, but will use his alternate forwards, at least from tackle to tackle, in a large part of the contest.

Lucien Powell and Irwin Fike stand out among the ends, but for each of the other five positions there is an alternate of close to equal strength. The second five is the heavier and the equal of the first string in most elements playing.

The Navy squad will leave Annapolis at 6:45 Friday evening and will arrive at Elkhart, 14 miles from Notre Dame, at 10:50 Saturday morning.

Wychunas to Get Quarterback Job On Hoya Eleven

Held indoors the second straight day by inclement weather, Georgetown's gridmen did little more than run through signals for two hours yesterday in Ryan gym in preparation for Saturday's game with Penn at Philadelphia. Head Coach Jack Hagerty is still striving for the proper co-ordination in the backfield, which has been missing thus far.

There may be one important change in the starting line-up, Charley Wychunas at quarterback, a post that has gone abegging since Bob Nolan broke his leg. Wychunas has shown promise and Hagerty seems disposed to give him a chance in actual battle.

Indications that a large following of Hoya supporters will make the trip to Philadelphia for the game are seen in requests for tickets being received daily at the Hilltop. A special train probably will be chartered for students and alumni desiring to make the trip.

Tennis Club Meets.

The Washington Table Tennis Club will hold a meeting on Thursday, October 21, at 7:30 p. m., at their club room, 1303 E street northwest. The purpose of the meeting is to draw the schedule for the league matches.

American U. Halfback Has Broken Hand

Ace Runner to Be Lost to Team for Rest of Season.

The injury jinx which has plagued the American University football team all season took its heaviest toll yesterday when an X-ray picture proved the hand injury sustained by Emerson Bartlett, veteran halfback, in Saturday's game with Mount St. Mary's to be a fracture.

Bartlett, last year's outstanding individual star of the Eagles who had been counted on heavily by American in the William and Mary game this Saturday, will be lost to the team for the rest of the season, Dr. Arthur C. Christie, school physician, announced. As he is a senior his career is ended.

Coach Gus Welch, desperate for replacements, has been forced into a rebuilding job that was not superceded by the task of selecting the original starting team. The loss of three regulars, John Jazlonski, Bob Hall and George Brown, all of whom missed the Mount St. Mary's game, is expected to be felt, as is the loss of Bartlett.

The discovery of George Taylor, plucked from the campus only a few days ago by Welch, is the secret hope of the Eagles after the scrimmage sessions in preparation for the Williamsburg game. His brilliant ball carrying against the varsity has impressed the coaching staff and he is being considered as a substitute for the injured Bartlett.

Meanwhile at Williamsburg, where the Indians are awaiting the Eagles, the return of Lloyd Phillips, injured sophomore back, after a ten-day lay-off, has bolstered their stock, but several regulars are still on the shelf.

Stan Kamen, hustling junior end, was injured again in the Guilford clash, which William and Mary won easily, and will probably be lost for ten days. Elmo Legg, sophomore from Arlington, will replace Kamen this week.

Tulane Drills Here For Tarheel Game

Tulane's football squad worked out in the Capital City yesterday en route to Chapel Hill, N. C., where it meets North Carolina Saturday.

Carnegie Man Chosen.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 19—American Kennel Club's approval of E. M. Joel, of Carnegie, Pa., as superintendent, and eight judges for the Western Maryland Kennel Club's seventh annual all-breed dog show to be held Saturday, November 6, at the State armory, has been announced.

Penalty for Failure to Meet Teuton

Lenglet Is Suspended by Solons for Butting Washington Boy.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 19.—The heavyweights moved back into the legal picture today when former Champion James J. Braddock and Joe Gould, his manager, appeared before the New York State Athletic Commission and were given until December 1 to pay penalties of $1,000 each.

The fines were levied on them for failing to appear at the commission offices five days before Braddock's scheduled defense of his championship against Max Schmeling on June 3 last. At the time Braddock was in the West training for a title bout with Joe Louis, to whom he lost his crown in Chicago on June 22.

Gould made the point this afternoon that he never considered paying the money because of the ruling of a United States court in Philadelphia. The court set aside Madison Square Garden's request for a restraining order on the Louis-Braddock fight, and Gould held that inasmuch as the court had not recognized the Braddock-Schmeling contracts, such contracts were voided and he was not subject to any penalty.

Claims $5,000 Due.

Braddock's manager also entered a claim for the $5,000 forfeit which Braddock put up as a guarantee of good faith to meet Schmeling.

Gen. John J. Phelan, boxing commission chairman, rejected his claim and insisted that if the $2,000 in fines was not paid by December 1 he would turn the matter over to the attorney general's office. Gould replied that he was willing to make a test case of it in the courts.

Gen. Phelan, however, had the last word. He announced that the suspensions handed Braddock and Gould at the same time as their fines would stick until the entire matter had been settled.

Meanwhile, Petey Sarron, N. B. A. featherweight champion from Birmingham, Ala., and Henry Armstrong, Los Angeles Negro who is California titleholder, formally signed articles for their 15-round bout on October 29, which will mark Mike Jacobs' debut as promoter in Madison Square Garden.

Belloise in Line.

Both fighters agreed that the winner would make his first defense against Mike Belloise, of New York. The latter had been recognized as champion in New York State, but has been stricken with pneumonia and will be inactive for several more months.

The commission also suspended Andre Lenglet, French heavyweight champion, for 30 days for "conduct unbecoming a sportsman." In his bout at the Hippodrome last Friday night with Marty Gallagher, of Washington, D. C., the Frenchman several times was guilty of butting his opponent.

The commission recognized Max Waxman as the manager of Harry Jeffra, the new bantamweight champion from Baltimore. There had been a prolonged dispute between Waxman and J. L. Rosenfeld, of Baltimore, about the ownership of Jeffra's contract, with threats of court proceedings.

Thorson Is Victor At Empire City

Empire City Race Track, N. Y., Oct. 19 (AP).—Thorson, a veteran that branches out and beats the good ones of the handicap division every once in a while, was in one of his running moods today and scampered off an easy winner of the Glenbrook Handicap of a mile and 70 yards, acing through a drizzling rain and over a track deep in mud, the Buckley M. Byers 5-year-old scored by three lengths at odds of 6 to 1. J. D. Norris' lightly weighted Danger Point, backed from 15's down to 8's, closed with a belated rush to take the place by two lengths from Mrs. Emil Denemark's War Minstrel, the 11-to-10 favorite.

War Minstrel, beaten a nose by Heelfly in the Potomac Handicap at Havre de Grace, barely headed Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' Caballero II for fourth money. C. V. Whitney's Roustabout was last all the way. The time was 1:45 flat.

Kozeluh Is Victor In Tennis Open

Kozeluh outlasted Bruce Barnes in a blistering five-set final match, after dropping the third and fourth sets, to win 6-2, 6-3, 4-6, 4-6, 6-1.

The champion advanced to the finals by eliminating Joe Whalen, defending titlist, 6-1, 6-4, 6-0. Barnes defeated George Lott in the semifinals, 6-0, 6-2, 7-5.

Neusel Is Victor.

London, Oct. 19 (AP).—Walter Neusel, German heavyweight, outpointed Maurice Strickland, of New Zealand, in a 12-round bout tonight. Neusel weighed 203½ pounds and Strickland 187½.

6,500 Brave Rain to See Airegla Take Feature Event at Laurel Track

Victor Pays $6.50 Mutuel In 'Bolivar'

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 19.—Miss Mollie Collum, of New York, whose horses are listed on the program as owned by "Mr. French," watched Airegla from her stable lead every inch of the way in the Bolivar Purse, today's feature event. Disregarding the slippery going, Airegla went around the course to finish 3½ lengths ahead of Sun Flo and another 2½ lengths in advance of Handcuff.

The latter, fresh from a brilliant second to Merry Lassie in New York, was installed the favorite in a field thatn umbered five starters. Jockey Sonny Workman gave Handcuff a hard ride, but the Whichone filly could never better her third position. Sun Flo stumbled and almost fell at the first turn and ran wide thereafter.

Jockey Joe Renick had the mount on Airegla and tip-toed her to the front going to the clubhouse turn. From that point to the final bend he rated her along. Renick then shook her up a bit and the filly drew away to be taken in hand through the final sixteenth.

Airegla paid a $9.70 mutuel. The race was run through a driving rain and before a scant crowd of 6,500. The track looked like the rear of the soft-drink stand at a country picnic.

C. E. George, Washington hotel man, watched his Postponement score a half-length victory in the first race. The Charles Town horse, despite breaking next to last, was the winner "going away" by a half length over Brides Delight. The first two horses were in the "field," which paid a $26.40 win mutuel. Miss Lily, a newcomer here, was heavily played and took down third money.

For some reason, the judges called for a photo of the finish of the steeplechase but the majority of Spinach backers had already torn up their tickets. Promoter was the winner by upward of a neck margin and returned $10.10 for the usual duece. Trojan Racket finished third some 100 lengths in front of Happy Joe, the only other horse to finish the course. Syriac fell and Postman Home and Big March lost riders during the running. Spinach sat all the pace and looked like the winner for a mile and a half but Promoter saved ground and wore him down in the final drive.

A. J. Joiner's Grass Cutter proved much the best in the third race, winning by four lengths while Jockey Wayne Wright tugged on the reins in an effort to narrow the margin. Pernie was second and Hi Cliff third behind the $6.40 shot.

Jockey Sonny Workman, the Washington boy who recently signed with A. G. Vanderbilt, put up one of his best rides to save the fourth race for the favorite players. Aboard Tiger Teddy and apparently beaten in midstretch, Workman went to the whip anu drove the gelding on to beat Paper Drop by a length. Paper Drop had a four-length lead most of the way. Tiger paid $3.60.

The day's finale went to Sugaboot at a $12.80 mutuel. Marvel Play and Durwrack chased the winner home.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PROMOTER, $10.10, $5.20, $4.40; SPINACH, $5.50, $4.40; TROJAN RACKET, $4.10.

PROMOTER, in hand for a turn of track, gained steadily when placed to drive, saved ground and wore down SPINACH on final flat. SPINACH was sent to front going to first fence, was rated while setting pace, but could not resist the winner. TROJAN RACKET was forward factor throughout. FLYING FEATHERS weakened after gaining prominence. SYRIAC fell at tenth while running second. POSTMAN HOME and BIG MARCH lost riders at eleventh.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:33. Off 2:34½. Winner, A. J. Joyner's blk. c. (2), by Sickle—Armada. Trained by W. Mulholland. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:14.

At The Post

WITH BILL BENNINGS

Selections at Laurel.

Dear Al:

One of the most disappointed women I ever knew is the one who walked up to a clubhouse window the other day and asked for a ticket on Fore. The ticket seller handed her the pasteboard but after the longshot got home she tried to cash it and found that the ticket was on "No. 4." Jockey H. Mora has ridden his last race here this season. The apprentice who has been performing in good style started a fight with Apprentice W. Adleman following yesterday's third race and the stewards suspended him for ten days. Mora, a Texan, left for his home as soon as he got the bad news. War Admiral and Calumet Dick worked out on the sloppy track and their times were not sensational. Regarding a letter about the finish of the Alice G. race here last week, I admit that the picture was not clear but close examination showed the Tranquility Miss the winner. In addition, if it means anything, the chart callers named Alice G. before the official placings were announced. Several horsemen who were on the verge of shipping their horses to the "Battle of Narragansett" have unpacked the tack and will string along with the Free State. The trouble in Rhode Island has aided Maryland, which now has the cream of the turf world in its stables.

BILL.

First race—Fleeting Moon, bred for the off track and fit as that recent winning effort, seems well placed in the day's opener. Happy Hostess, in with a feather, will like the going and is dangerous. Flying Orphan and Riding High are at tops and may be closer if taken off the "also eligible" list.

Second race—Fast Express has come a long way since graduating from the maiden ranks and appears ready to beat this field. Needs only alert handling. Rough Party and Bread King are dead fit and will be in the thick of contention.

Third race—The Jeffords entry of Rambler Rose and Soigne gets my call in this sprint for fillies. The first named is the chief reliance. Flying Wild is honest and will not be far out of it. Fancy That is better than generally rated.

Championship-Bound Gonzaga Tackles Eastern High Eleven Today

Solem's Doing Nicely With Syracuse.

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1937, for The Washington Post.

New York, Oct. 19. (U.P.). The Gridiron's great rescuer goes to town:

Ossie Solem, an amiable, quiet-voiced giant of a man, perpetrated one of the Nation's outstanding upsets last week when his newly adopted Syracuse team beat Cornell.

Solem, former Minnesota tackle who measures up to the Gopher dimensions of a football player, is boosting Syracuse back into the major football picture, just as he did Drake and Iowa in former years.

* * * *

Syracuse is one of the East's four perfect-record elevens. But is Ossie Solem satisfied? He says, "No—we are still wondering if our system has been installed alright."

* * * *

Solem took over the Orange destinies on January 2, 1937, after Vic Hanson resigned. Syracuse lured him in from Iowa, where he had done well. He took over a team that had lost seven straight games in 1936, most of them to traditional rivals. He took over an outfit that lost 14 letter men through graduation, including Albanese, crack fullback.

* * * *

Solem came in from Iowa of the Big Ten, faced with one of the most hopeless situations in Eastern football history. He took hold, installed his system—aided by Bill Boelter, Bud Wilkinson and Clarence Munn. His Syracuse eleven beat Clarkson, St. Lawrence and finally—Cornell.

* * * *

Ossie says, "Sure—we were pleasantly surprised when we beat Cornell. We were uncertain about the result of that game. We had scouted Cornell thoroughly and were prepared—even if Peck was still in Cornell's backfield. But we were not satisfied with the manner in which our boys played. They should have done better."

* * * *

Syracuse beat Cornell, 14-6, after starting with six sophomores in the line-up. But Solem says the offensive and defensive maneuvers should be much better. Confident Ossie explains, "It shouldn't take long for these boys to master our style of play—if you can call it a style. Any boy who is in good physical condition and who has a normal mind can shift from one so-called system to another during any off-season. I found that true at Drake and at Iowa—and now I'm finding it true at Syracuse.

* * * *

"No—I don't know what system Vic Hanson used before I came to Syracuse. I never investigated. But the boys and the entire student body at Syracuse have such a wonderful spirit that I could bring in a North Pole system and they would grab on to it and understand it immediately. They've got a great spirit up here—that's the thing!"

* * * *

How did Ossie compare his Syracuse talent with that which he had at Iowa. Well—Ossie said there wasn't much difference except that he had no Giants at Syracuse. Instead, all of his men were of normal height and weight and very fast—particularly Marty Glickman, whose fire and speed provided the two touchdowns against Cornell.

* * * *

"Maybe it was just as well that 14 letter men were lost through grduation," said Ossie. "Maybe it's just as well that I had to send six sophomores into the starting line-up against Cornell. But we're not satisfied yet. We hold our breath every time our team takes the field. And next season it will be worse, with Duke and Michigan State on the schedule. But everybody is doing his best. We have about 5,700 students, of which 60 per cent are men. We have a squad of about 50. Everybody is fighting hard. We should have a good team next year."

Celanese Booters Lead.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 19—Celanese A. A. booters, with a leg on the championship trophy offered last season at stake this year in games with Westvaco A. A., defeated the Pulpmen, 2-0, at Westernport to draw first blood in the series. It was Westvaco's first game in the Alleghany County Soccer League and the Silks second straight triumph.

was now, like Lucas, fully protected against snake-bite, insisted that Costello decide their bet. Hairbreadth Harry would have none of it, but after partaking of some of the anti-toxin, and then willing to look the most ferocious snake in the eye, he hit upon an idea.

* * *

"Come on down town with me and we'll get this thing settled. We'll ask the first man we meet to decide which is the most popular in New York—Yale or Notre Dame, and his decision goes." It was agreed.

* * *

Downtown they went. The first person they encountered was a whitewing at work in the gutter. Cautiously Costello approached him. "My good man, hic, how did Notre Dame come out today?" Hairbreadth Harry asked the public servant.

* * *

* * *

"Good," said Hairbreadth Harry. "Now how about Yale?"

"From Yale I dunno and from Yale I don't give a damn, but Notre Dame I know she win."

* * * *

Undefeated Team Faces Stern Test

By Jack Munhall.

Gonzaga Prep, rushing headlong toward a city football championship, will stop off at Eastern Stadium this afternoon to fulfill a date with Eastern High School at 3:30 o'clock.

The Purple, already victorious over Central, 6-0, and Tech, 20-0, two of Eastern's interhigh playmates, would like nothing better than to add the Lincoln Park eleven to its list. Still undefeated after three contests, Gonzaga wil lrule a favorite over Eastern because of its flashy backfield, rated the best in scholastic ranks. This quartet of young men, Jim Ellis, Jim Shaw, Louis Defilippo and Eddie Shea, ran circles around Tech to administer the T-Streeters their worst defeat in several years.

Eastern has a word or two to say when good backs are discussed. The "two little words" are Al Kidwell and Billy Kemp, who are largely responsible for Eastern leading the interhigh school football series. Kidwell, all-high halfback, and Kemp, most valuable player last year t his center position, from which he was switched to quarterback, are a fast-flying pair.

But so were Jack Belote and Henry Rassier, of Tech, and Gonzaga's fast-charging line led by Frank Fenwick and Joe McDonald completely shackled them. Incidentally, this Ganzaga forward wall has not yielded a touchdown this season, only points registered against the Purple resulting from a field goal by Loyola.

Eastern's main chance for an upset victory would appear to lay in its superior passing attack and punting. Strange as it seems on the face of its record, Gonzaga has neither a punter nor a passer of note, but rather relies on the relentless running of Ellis and Shaw and the rest who simply outspeed the foes.

Eastern's Kemp, as well as Kidwell, is able to throw effective passes and Dick Wade, an experienced end, has proved his ability on the receiving end.

Women's Tourney Halted by Rain

The field day for the Women's District of Columbia Golf Association club teams, scheduled yesterday at Congressional, but postponed because of rain, will be played tomorrow, with original pairings and starting times adhered to for the 162 players.

It will make two tourneys in two days for the women golfers, as the N. B. C. event is also on the card Friday, over the Congressional course.

Maryland Hunters Complete Second Day Derby Field Trial

Despite rain that alternately poured and drizzled, the second day of the annual field trials of the Maryland Fox Hunters Association yesterday completed the derby field trials.

The rain made the meet a more or less disagreeable event for both dogs and riders. The cast was postponed until 9 a. m. instead of 6:45 as had been scheduled. Entries totaled 63 when the second day of the trials finally got under way.

George Willson, of Rockville, master of hounds, will sound the bugle this morning at 6:45 o'clock for the start of the two-day all-age trials at Bradley Farms.

Among the prizes to be offered are the Clarence L. Gilpin Memorial Challenge Cup for the dog with the highest average; the "Cy" Cummings Memorial Challenge Cup for the second highest general average; the R. Harris Challenge Cup for the highest average in hunting and trailing, and the Louis Bolden Challenge Cup for the highest average in speed and drive. Any foxhound, regardless of age and breeding, is eligible for entry.

Results of the two-day derby field trials were:

Endurance (winner awarded the Higgins Memorial Cup)—Perren, owned by Chester Lyons, first; Sampson, owned by Ed Carr, second; Corker, owned by J. H. Depue, Warren, W. Va., third, and Rolling On, owned by D. C. Sands, fourth. Socks, owned by Leonard Edwards, Silver Spring, Md., was very highly commended; Joe, owned by Eugene Wade, of Boyds, Md., was highly commended, and Rose, owned by Rolf and Bland, of Washington, was commended.

Hounds judges are: J. J. Hutton, L. N. Jetter, Frank S. Bradley, William E. Beall, Lean Alwood, T. B. Seibler, John Golden, R. T. Brosius, W. A. Marlow, John Wheeler and W. S. Randall. Lancelot Jocques is judge of the bench show.

Association officers are A. G. Rolfe, Washington, president; George Willson, Rockville, vice president; Mrs. Dorothy Gott Brosius, Rockville, secretary, and J. J. Hutton, Brookeville, treasurer. Members of the advisory board are Mrs. James R. Bland, Suitland; Z. M. Waters, Galthersburg and W. J. Aitcheson, Laurel.

An oyster roast will be held at 3:30 p. m. Friday at which a horn blowing contest will be held. Awards to derby and all age hounds will be presented at this affair.

Eddie Dunne Returns for Battle Here

Irish Eddie Dunne, sensational lightweight protege of the great Benny Leonard, and Sailor Borne, hard-hitting New Yorker, were signed yesterday to headline the opening fall indoor boxing show to be presented by Turner and Ahearn next Monday night, October 25, at Turner's Arena.

Quite satisfied with the success that attended the outdoor fistic season, the local fistic moguls set in motion yesterday plans to bring to the Fourteenth street emporium of sock the very best in boxing talent available.

Dunne, fresh from a successful five-month invasion of Ireland and England, where he won the lightweight title of both countries, made his debut at the arena some eight months ago, beating up Joey Straiges in a ten rounder before a sell-out crowd. In Dunne's corner was Leonard, who personally trains and manages the Irish boy.

Borne was considered the logical opponent for Irish Eddie following his draw with Irish Johnny Dean on the Scott-Ambers card. Fighting in the semiwindup, Borne hit Dean from stem to tern, and ringside opinion was that Borne deserved the duke.

There will be a strong supporting card, Goldie announced.

Duke Goes East For First Time

Durham, N. C., Oct. 19 (AP).—Wallace Wade will take a football team into the East for the first time in 14 years when Duke's Blue Devils play Colgate at Hamilton, N. Y., Saturday.

Wade, who played his football at Brown, hasn't revisited the sector in his official capacity since 1923, when his first Alabama team played Syracuse and took a 23-0 defeat.

Crosby Horse Wins.

San Mateo, Calif., Oct. 19 (AP).—Bing Crosby's highly regarded 2-year-old High Strike won the Alameda Handicap at Bay Meadows today, running the six furlongs in 1:11 4-5 to defeat Alaskan by a half length. Better Bet was third.

Postgrad

By Lewis F. Atchison

WITH THE Maryland-Syracuse game coming up Saturday at Baltimore, the time seems propitious for a piece on Edward Brooke (Untz) Brewer, the original mighty atom of almost two decades ago, for it was against another "Big Orange" eleven that "Untz" gained his greatest measure of fame.

Brewer hasn't changed much since he was the half-pint halfback on Maryland "State's" eleven. Time has added a bit of avoirdupois to the belt line, tinted his temples gray and taken, perhaps, some of the pendulum smoothness from his kicking leg, but withal he's still the same young fellow who scored one of the East's greatest upsets one gray day back in '20.

ATCHISON.

The final score that day was Maryland, 10; Syracuse, 7. In justice to "Untz" it should have read, Brewer, 10; Syracuse, 7. He didn't score all the points—only 3, the 3 winning points. But he did prevent Syracuse from making it 37-10. Psychology and Brewer's brilliant drop-kicking whipped Syracuse.

* * * *

"Untz" got off to a bad start that day, missing a 60-yard attempt by a good foot, kicking against the wind. He was chagrined, soft-pedaling it. It might have been the new shoes; they hut a little. But missing one liek that—and by a foat—made Untz think he was beginning to slip a little.

But over on the other side of the line Syracuse was thinking, too, and the players' thoughts were mirrored i ntheir faces. What the heck's the use," they seemed to be figuring. If the little guy can kick like that he'll just stand out here all day and kick enough field goals to beat us." As it turned out, "Untz" did beat 'em with a puny 30-yard kick. It was so easy he was half ashamed to count.

That Syracuse was no set-up you can gather from the line-up "Chick" Meehan sent on the field. It included Joe Alexander, All-American center; Gulick, tackle; Tommy Thompson, guard; Kellog and Zimmerman, backs. And it was a he-man's game. Zeke Bailey, of Maryland, now a Marine captain serving in China, suffered a broken jaw. Bloody noses were a dime a dozen, and if cleat marks couldn't be found on your face the other boys immediately suspected you of lying down on 'em.

It's a peculiar coincidence that Maryland comes up to the Syracuse game this year with another potential field goal threat in Pershing Mondorff, the tall, pigeon-toed Pennsylvanian who won last week's game with Virginia in a similar manner. Mondorff boots the ball a mile, but has difficulty getting height. In golf practice, he tops the ball, and the result is a low, scorching drive.

* * * *

But Brewer, ah, veterans will tell you he had everything a great kicker needs. His drop-kicks arched as nicely as some of our present-day punts, and his punts looked more like a pop fly off old Babe Ruth's bats. They tell us, because he was before our time, the ends used to get downfield and joke with the receiver while waiting for the ball to comn down.

In 1916, before "Untz" marched off to war, he got off a 95-yard punt against V. M. I. that was in the air 77 yards. That was the same year Navy played the Terps on a Wednesday—after all, Maryland was just an upstart farm school—and had a tough time winning, 70-7. Bill Ingram, the original copy, played in the game, and he probably recalls Brewer's kicking, because "Untz" got off a half-ilozen 60-yarders.

* * * *

Maryland's bitter State rivalry with Johns Hopkins was flourishing at the time, and the Terps were decided underdogs in the big game. But Brewer got away on an 85-yard touchdown run early in the game and kept the Bluejays dep in their own territory thereafter by his punting. The final score was 54-0, Maryland. Dr. George Leadbetter, who had been an All-American tackle at Colgate, and Bill Wood, later to star for Army at end, played for Hopkins.

It was also in '20 that Untz and "Pag" Paganucci broke their shoulders blocking on the same play in the Princeton game. "Untz" got off a couple of 80-yard punts that afternoon. Princeton had a couple of boys who looked fairly good—Don Laurie, quarterback, and Stan Kecfi, a tackle. Both were All-Americans.

* * * *

And it was in '20, too, that Brewer stood at second base in Oriole Park, Baltimore, and booted two field goals that enabled his mates to tie North Carolina, 6-6, in a hectic game. Al Sharpe, the old Yale back, referreed the game and told a friend later that Brewer's kicking was absolutely the greatest he'd ever seen.

* * * *

Where did "Untz" get his ability, that certain touch that made him brilliant in a field of good kickers? He was born with kicking ability, but he developed it as a youngster hanging around old Hoya Field at Georgetwon. He'd stand around and listen to what the coaches were saying, watch Harry Costello and the other backs performing and then go off on a vacant lot somewhere to practice.

He picked up quite a bit, too. He should have, for at that time Georgetown was hiring and firing coaches at the rate of one every two weeks.

Terps Bid For Eastern Recognition

Victory Over Syracuse Will Save Maryland's Prestige.

Not only victory but some measure of Eastern recognition will be at stake for Maryland Saturday when the Terrapins collide with Syracuse in Baltimore's municipal stadium.

Following on the heels of the Orange's stunning upset of a previously unbeaten Cornell team, Saturday's game is certain to attract a vast amount of interest. Syracuse will be fighting to retain its undefeated status, knowing full well that it has a tough proposition in the Old Line eleven, and Maryland, of course, is aiming for greater recognition.

The Terps' 28-21 defeat at Penn's hands in their second test of the season is the lone smirch on their record to date, and a victory over Syracuse will go far toward atoning for that loss. Victories over Western Maryland, 6-0, and Virginia, 3-0, indicate the team's potential power. Pershing Mondorff's 45-yard field goal, incidentally, may not only have been the margin of victory over the Cavaliers, but may be a season's record, for a perusal of the books fails to disclose a longer kick at this early date.

Marty Glickman, Syracuse halfback, undoubtedly is the man to stop if Maryland hopes to win, and the coaching staff is fully aware of this. Yesterday, during an indoor workout staged in the gym, a slim, speedy freshman back was detained to do Glickman's chores in the "Syracuse" backfield, and while the workout was not entirely satisfactory because of cramped quarters, it was sufficient to show the varsity what it is in for.

Dawes Holds Market Drop Not Serious

Merely Indicative of an Expected Business Recession.

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 19.—Gen. Charles G. Dawes, Chicago financier, expressed his opinion today that the current break in the Wall Street market does not denote a rapidly approaching major depression.

The performance of business in past depressions, Gen. Dawes said, indicated a business recession should be expected, but that it should not last long.

The former Vice President based his predictions upon a study of conditions between 1899 and 1902, which, he said, more or less paralleled current trends.

He recalled days at the turn of the century when the stock market fell rapidly, but general business did not follow the downturn with the same degree of severity. The market was jolted hard in 1901 when Northern Pacific stock was cornered, he said, but the jolt did not hit business so hard.

Gen. Dawes added that economists still regard that period as one of general prosperity for general business.

"A sudden fall in stock quotations during a period of prosperity, when general credits of the country are not unduly expanded, does not necessarily presage any dangerous slackening of general business," he said.

He refused, however, to predict the future trend of Wall Street. He pointed out that stock markets are always affected suddenly by abrupt alterations in business sentiment, because it is possible to dump stocks overboard quickly.

The wartime chairman of the general purchasing board of the American Expeditionary Force, who has been in Europe attending ceremonies marking the twentieth anniversary of the World War, sails for home tomorrow.

$50,000,000 Bills 3.2 Times Subscribed

Acting Secretary of the Treasury Magill announced last evening that the tenders for $50,000,000, or thereabouts, of 273-day Treasury bills, to be dated October 20, 1937, and to mature July 20, 1938, which were offered on October 15, were opened at the Federal Reserve banks on October 18.

The total applied for was $163,285,000, of which $50,025,000 was accepted.

Business Failures.

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—Business failures in the United States for the week ended October 14 totaled 174, against 146 in the preceding week and 139 in the like week a year ago, according to Dun & Bradstreet.

D. C. Business 2% Below Par In September

Business in Washington at the end of September stood at 2 per cent below normal, according to the monthly survey of 147 trading areas in the United States conducted by the research department of Brooks, Smith, French & Dorrance, Inc., New York and Detroit advertising concern.

The September figure represented no change from the index for August, 1937, but showed a gain of 3 per cent over the figure for September, 1936, when conditions were at 5 per cent below normal.

"After see-sawing during the summer months, making a slight gain one month and sliding back the next, the national business index during September remained parallel with August at 4 per cent below normal," the report states. "Among the 147 trading areas of the country, the number registering gains just about balanced those which either remained at the August level or lost slightly. Gains were registered in 75 areas and losses in 52, while 20 showed no change."

The Market

A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Break in Record Trade Session, but Then Rally; U. S. Bonds Off.

New York, Oct. 19.—Price declines in all financial markets with activity higher than anything seen since the early days of the last previous depression, financial markets had a bad day but bore up with less nervousness and hysteria than was to have been expected from the universality of the selling. Stocks broke as much as a dozen points in the medium to high-priced leading industrial sections, rallied to recover much of the losses, and then fell back a little before the close, which saw 2 to 5-point declines in the majority of active shares. The turnover in stocks was over 7,000,000 shares, the largest since July 21, 1933.

United States bonds also lurched badly, partly because of the general rush of pessimism and the necessity for selling in one position to protect another but largely because of the nonchalant announcement by the President that he was mistaken on his earlier promises of the deficit and that actually the difference in spending and revenues would be at least twice the early estimate.

Wall Street came to work this morning quite prepared to see a further break in stock prices on heavy selling, for the tumble in prices yesterday had made certain that many margined accounts would have to be lightened, to say nothing of the frightening of stock out of both margin holders and investors' hands. Early prices were only down 1 to 5 points, with some large blocks at the start, and considerable difficulty was found in securing bids to take care of the stock pressing for sale. After the wheels began turning, about 10 or 15 minutes after the opening, prices faded rapidly, sales volume rose and the ticker steadily fell behind, reaching its worst around noon when it was 22 minutes late (25 minutes later than actual floor trading), the worst delay yet experienced with the so-called "fast" ticker system installed seven years ago.

From Everywhere.

When prices turned and began to harden, the ticker caught up until by the last hour it was almost even with the market, only to fall behind again on further price uncertainty.

At the worst the leading issues, as Steel and Chrysler, broke 5 to 10 points, and at their best small gains were shown, with recovery from the lows reaching 4 to 6 points. Here and there low-priced stocks lost more than half their market price and losses of 2 to 8 points were the rule. Sales came from everywhere and again the stock list was an unusually broad one, with extreme losses here and there for stocks which hadn't appeared for some time.

Able to Rally.

In one respect the stock market looked more promising today than it has done in some time. It developed real rallying power at a time when selling looked heaviest. By no means all was short covering. The fall in prices, aggravated by margin pressure and fear of no telling what calamity, brought as it always has done further sales at "the market," regardless of what that might be. These conditions always attract the so-called "bargain hunters" and the demand for stocks that appeared before midday today was substantial and sufficient to give numerous stocks advances above the previous closing prices. The idea spread that the market was going through a selling climax that warranted a try for at least a "turn."

The Doctor's Address.

Meanwhile, the rumors of closing the stock exchange, the formation of another "bond pool," as was done in the former depression, and other reports bred of fear were largely unfounded. Certainly no disposition was shown in Wall Street to make matters infinitely worse by closing the stock exchange. Moreover, the feeling that if financial aid is needed or desired to stop the bear market or to save hides, the responsibility lies with the New Dealers. Wall Street neither sees the necessity for supporting "pools," nor is it of a mind to venture into the Government's captured province of market management.

The President, at least, doesn't seem to think it matters much what the stock market does. On the score of trouble for underwriting houses, that question is largely one of bank loans to carry undigested securities. The ills now suffered were foretold plentifully when New Deal legislation barring the strong and the able from the investment banking field was passed. Left to the small and comparatively inexperienced houses, some over-eating has been done, and a little indigestion was to be expected.

Will Hurt Everyone.

Whatever may be the public's view of the causes for the beginning of the stock market decline and whatever may be the immediate influences at work, such as forced margin sales, short selling, frightened liquidation, foreign withdrawals on fear of exchange restrictions, and the like, the break in prices has now gone far enough to become the most important of all the busines and political influences at work.

Built on Sand.

The market's decline may be said to represent the carrying away of the remainder of confidence in business circles in President Roosevelt. Whether he wishes to or not, the President no longer can ignore the course of prices. His reference to the "rise in prosperity" simply makes him appear ridiculous, almost as ridiculous as now appears to be the calling of an extra session of Congress in November to consider such items as a law to shorten working hours and increase wages in industry. By the time Congress meets the problem to solve may be one of finding work and not one of haggling over hours and wage rates.

It has required nearly four years for businessmen as a body to discover that their presumed prosperity under the New Deal was built upon an unfirm foundation. Markets may be supported by some new hocus-pocus—for a time—but sound recovery can come only from the construction of a new base. The Administration will have the chance of showing whether it is willing to scrap as failures its experiments entered into so blithely in 1933, or it can stubbornly sail the country onto the rocks by edging further toward dictatorship. Meanwhile, should a real depression develop, the country will be in a poorer condition to fight it with the old weapons. The public debt is unconscionably high and the Government credit is weakening. The bootstraps are about to give way, even though the Brain Trusters may still think the country can lift itself by that means.

We Planned This.

A reader who has been jolted around in the market recently asks what the oft-quoted phrase: "We planned it that way," referred to. This is the answer:

"Yes, we are on the way back—not by mere chance, not by a turn of the cycle. We are coming back more soundly than ever before, because we planned it that way, and don't let anybody tell you differently."—President Roosevelt at Charleston, S. C., October 23, 1935.

Wheat Prices Stage Rally In Late Trade

Export Trade Purchases 800,000 Bushels to Aid Recovery.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—Paralleling action of securities, the Chicago wheat market today largely overcame in the late dealings new severe setbacks that earlier approximated 4 cents a bushel. Export buying of North American wheat, totaling upwards of 800,000 bushels, helped to bring about the best wheat price rallies.

Closing quotations of Chicago wheat futures were 1⅜@2¼ cents lower compared with yesterday's finish, December, 97⅜@97⅝; May, 97¾@97⅞; July, 91½@91⅝; corn, ¼ to 1½ down; December, 59; May, 60½; July, 61; oats, ¼@⅜ off; December, 30⅝, and rye showing 1⅛@1⅞ drop; December, 71⅞. Provisions closed at 15 to 50 cents setback.

Curb Irregular; Heavy Trading

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—Curb stocks swirled into an irregular finish today after the biggest and wildest day of trading in more than four years. Transactions totaled 1,632,000 shares, the largest since July 13, 1933, and comparing with 799,000 yesterday.

Aluminum Co. Weather-Vane of high-priced specialties, rambled over a range of 13 points. In the forenoon it nose-dived 7 points then climbed in the afternoon rally to finish at 91, up 6.

Electric Bond & Share common finished ⅝ higher at 7½, but the 6 per cent preferred ended at 53, off 5½.

B. & O. Carloadings.

Baltimore, Oct. 19.—Carloadings on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for the week ended October 16, totaled 51,966, comprising 33,682 cars loaded on line and 18,214 received from connections. For the same week of 1936, total loads were 52,037, consisting of 35,313 cars loaded on line and 16,724 received from connections. For the same week of 1930, the total was 63,936, of which 41,676 cars were loaded on line and 22,280 received from connections.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 19.—The stock market closed weak, with transatlantic shares in large supply and the gilt-edged group and foreign bonds were lower. There was heavy selling in the industrial section and oils and mining issues were weak. The decline followed the sharp break in Wall Street Monday.

Paris—Banking shares were exceptionally weak in the bourse today. Bank of France declining 140 francs. Government bonds and international issues sold lower. Suez Canal finishing with a net loss of 430 francs.

Liverpool—Further rains in the Argentine and weakness in North American markets caused wheat futures to decline, and prices were ¼d higher to ½d lower. Cotton futures lost 6 to 8 points, influenced by the easiness in overseas markets and hedge selling. There was some trade and commission house buying.

Credit Man Sees Favorable Trade

New York, Oct. 19.—Although the stock market break is having its effect on business conditions, business generally will hardly parallel the "blues" of the market, Henry H. Heimann, executive manager of the National Association of Credit Men, declares in his monthly review of business sent today to the association's 20,000 members.

"There can be no doubt that the slump will contribute to some further lack of confidence and promotion of cautious policies," the credit executive points out.

"But with a splendid farm income, vast unfilled needs in durable goods lines, improved private debt situation, larger wage envelope for the average worker, plentiful supply of credit to the worthy and deserving at attractive rates, business should give a satisfactory performance even though it must and probably will have to lower its sights somewhat."

Clubs Prepare For Festivities At Halloween

Observances Set for Both Nights of October 30 and November 1.

By Chanticleer

Some of the after-dark spots will celebrate Halloween Saturday night, October 30, and some have selected the following Monday night for the big show. Reason is that many of the spots in nearby Virginia have all the patrons they can handle on Saturday nights as 'tis—and so Monday night offers a better, a more attractive time for whoopee. Further, it's a big pay day week-end and the boys and girls ought to have a double occasion for celebrating.

Among those observing the Halloween holiday Monday night are River Bend; Nightingale, Boulevard Farms, and Brinkley's here in town.

• • • •

The Shoreham this week is featuring in its new Blue Room that popular "painter of songs," Henri Therrien, and an exotic dance team, Mildred and Maurice. Despite this professional combination, a couple of youngsters, college kids, are wowing the Shorehamites with a demonstration of the Big Apple. Incidentally, the Shoreham has broken down with the rest of the world, and come 11 o'clock nightly Barnee calls for a real Big Apple ring.

• • • •

Paul Kain and his ork continue at the Wardman Park Metronome Room. . . . Sasha Bartnovsky and his Russian orchestra play nightly at the newly opened Troika, also featuring Russian sketches. . . Victor Mollet, check room boss at the Raleigh's Pall Mall Room, has dug up a new wrinkle. Victor has a pin cushion handy and sticks pins with colored heads into the cushion to form the date of the month.

• • • •

Eddie Daniels and his orchestraa are playing at the Cocoanut Grove, where the attractions also include a chorus of eight girls and the dance team of Faye and Wellington. Dinner from $1 . . . Kay Woods has come to the Mayfair as playmate for Jack and Leo. Kay (pictured elsewhere on this page) is a soprano, hails from Dallas, has been singing at the Montclair, in New York, and Chicago's Congress . . . That Anchor Room at the Annapolis has no details undone. The port holes are fixed with lights in such a way that it appears on the inside as though waves were splashing high on the outside.

• • • •

A songstress named Costello, from Baltimore, brought many huzzahs from the customers at Brinkley's Monday night. Capacity crowd there. Jimmy Bright and his ork play nightly . . . Dave McWilliams' orchestra, directed by George Stein, provide the music at River Bend, where Spanish moss gives the original old log cabin building a cozy and intimate feeling. Big dance floor, too . . . Pete Macias, the old-timer of the local precincts, is at the old stand on Connecticut avenue—yessir, the Club Heigh Ho.

• • • •

Peter Borras is becoming quite the civic leader. He goes this week to Hagerstown to address the Rotary Club on the Spanish situation. Gerson Kaufman, of Host Borras' orchestra at the Madrillon, has completed a new arrangement of "Blue Skies." Not to be outdone, Al Spieldock, also of Johnnie Shaw's ork, re-arranger "Posin' " . . . Eight of "Broadway's loveliest show girls" have arrived for a two-week appearance at Bamboo Gardens. They'll go into the Loew's Capitol on their return to the big burg.

• • • •

The Samuel Brothers head the week's bill at the Lotus. With Fleming they form a novelty trio that really does things. Other acts include Wardell and Dade, Marion Dawn, Vera Hayes, Buddy Shaner and Bill Strickland's Capitolians, aided and abetted by Al Norton. Eight girls form the Lotus dancing chorus.

On the Night Club Floors This Week

Kay Woods has come to the Mayfair to join Jack and Leo in their afternoon and nightly floor turns. Kay has been singing at Chicago's Congress Hotel. Below—Helen Malcolm, now singing at the Ambassador's Hi Hat Room.

Program Mapped For Hearing Week

National Hearing Week will be celebrated, beginning Sunday, it was announced yesterday by Miss Betty C. Wright, executive director of the American Society for the Hard of Hearing.

Miss Ada Morgan, chairman of the National Hearing Week committee of the Washington League for the Hard of Hearing, said the clubrooms at 1116 Vermont avenue would be open from 3 to 5:30 p. m. each afternoon of the week.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will broadcast from Boston at 10:45 p. m. Tuesday over the Columbia Broadcasting System, taking as her theme, "It's Sound Sense to Conserve Hearing."

Church Recital Tonight.

Miss Naomi Hewitt, formerly of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, assisted by the vested youth choir of 30 voices of the Ninth Street Christian Church, will give a program at 8 p. m. tonight at the Takoma Park Christian Church. Admission will be a silver offering.

Irene Castle Sleeps As Half Estate Burns

Chicago, Oct. 19 (AP).—While Mrs. Irene Castle McLaughlin slept in the main house of her suburban Lake Forest estate, fire destroyed the guesthouse, stables and greenhouse today at an estimated loss of $15,000.

McLaughlin was not at the estate. Since the famous former dancer started divorce proceedings he has been living in a Chicago apartment.

P. U. C. Joins Study Of Trolley Crash

Inspectors of the Public Utilities Commission yesterday joined Capital Transit Co. officials in investigation of Monday's streetcar crash at Fifteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, which sent nine persons to hospital with various injuries.

A preliminary inquiry revealed that the main brakerod of a southbound car on Fifteenth street jammed as the trolley rounded a corner at New York avenue. The heavy vehicle, loaded almost to capacity, gained speed on the downgrade and rammed the rear of another car loading passengers.

Both the air and hand brakes, it was revealed, were put out of commission when the main rod failed to work. A final report from the P. U. C. was delayed pending an extensive inquiry.

YOUR INSPECTION INVITED, just on the chance that you haven't already been to the Mayfair, 13th & F.

BABY CHICKS, all breeds, are thoroughly tested so they can grow up and become excellent dinners at the Mayfair, 13th & F.

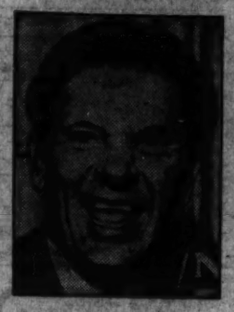
Bob Burns Says—



You can say what you want to about schoolin' but it does make a person an authority on different subjects and it teaches him to be accurate.

Not long ago I had a big scientist out at the house for dinner and he happened to mention somethin' about the Ozark Mountains bein' fifteen billion years old. Aunt Pudey spoke up and says, "I beg your pardon, professor, the Ozark Mountains are fifteen billion and twenty-six years old."

The scientist was so surprised that she could have such accurate knowledge and he says, "How do you arrive at those figures?" and Aunt Pudey says, "Well, it was 26 years ago when I was going to school that I read they were fifteen billion years old then."

By the Associated Press.

Following is the text of last night's radio address by Alf Landon, 1936 Republican Presidential nominee:

I have called a meeting of the 17,000,000 men and women who voted for the Republican ticket last fall. I have taken it upon myself to call this meeting because I held the honor of being the standard-bearer of the cause for which your votes were cast.

I wish to suggest ways and means by which we, the minority party, can be of outstanding service to our country. This demands unity in our party, the laying aside of all petty differences and all personal feeling. Of course, in every great party there are those who differ on details, plans and procedure, but these fade to insignificance under the shadow of the growing threat to our Republic. This major issue is so great that it dwarfs all minor differences and transcends party labels. The challenge to our country today is that citizens lay aside all personal, factional and party prejudices and join in the fight to preserve the Republic.

Silence Due to "Good Taste."

Through the modern miracle of radio it is possible for us to assemble in one great gathering, even though we be spread from one end of the Nation to the other. And so I am using this vehicle to discuss informally with you two events of great importance.

But first, let me digress for a moment to review some of the circumstances leading up to these events which so vitally affect the lives of all of us.

During the past months I have received hundreds and thousands of letters, earnestly inquiring why I have remained silent so long. I would like to take a moment to tell you why.

First, I believe that under normal conditions, when a man has been elected to public office, good taste and good Government demand that we give him free rein to establish those policies which he promised the voters in order to secure their votes. Frankly, I had hoped that after the election we might consolidate the gains this country had made in a new vision of civic righteousness. Last December, after election, I called on the President in Washington and told him that I wished to do my part to create a spirit of harmony and solidarity among us as a people.

Court Plan Startled Nation.

Then, suddenly, last February, without warning, the President made an attempt to control the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States. Just at the time when we were trying to heal the scars of class-consciousness, just at the time when we hoped a world torn by war and threats of war would feel that we were a country at peace at home, he instituted a bitter controversy that shook this Nation to its foundations. But once more, I remained silent. I felt it my patriotic duty to do nothing which would give anyone an opportunity to make a partisan issue out of this great crisis.

But now the time has come to act.

In a recent speech Mr. Roosevelt stated that progress lags in this country. He said that the lawyers of our country and the Constitution have kept us 20 years behind the times. Now, I agree with Mr. Roosevelt that progress lags. I think all of you agree that progress lags. That makes it unanimous. So one of the outstanding questions in America today is, "Why does progress lag?"

Denies Alternatives.

The President has said that we must accept one of two alternatives. We must take his personal form of Government—we must give him more and more power. We must coerce Congress. We must submerge the Supreme Court. We must strike down anyone who raises a voice of objection to the way he does things. We must do all of these things or else go back to the old order of things—back to manipulation by "malefactors of great wealth," back to sweatshops, back to starvation wages. Of course, if people believe that we must either have a one-man Government or social and economic chaos, there is no question as to what their choice is going to be. The manner in which Mr. Roosevelt puts the question reminds me of the lawyer who said to a witness, "Have you stopped beating your wife? Answer yes or no."

The real question facing this country today is, "Why do we lag in social progress?"

I am going to tell you why I believe social progress lags, and I believe I can prove it to you beyond all question of doubt. The real reason why progress has lagged in America during the last four and one-half years is the failure of the President of the United States to follow our constitutional method of Government and his failure as an administrator.

Analyzes Career.

The President says that constitutional methods are too slow—it takes too long to do things in the way the Constitution prescribes. But I submit that if we had followed constitutional methods we would have made many times as much progress as we have made during Mr. Roosevelt's Administration.

I would like to point out that Mr. Roosevelt's career as President divides itself into two parts: The first phase of his career deals with the first few months when he was in office, from March, 1933, to July, 1933. During those few months he performed commendable service. He rose to the emergency with emergency action. He fed the hungry; he sheltered the homeless; he replaced fear with confidence and hope.

Then came the second period—the period of working out a far-seeing, long range program of social reform. This was a different situation. This required a different type of ability. This was a job which required quiet, hard, painstaking work.

During the first four months of Mr. Roosevelt's Administration industrial production rose 37 per cent. Things began to hum. Industry was picking up. People were regaining their confidence. Then came Mr. Roosevelt's first important piece of supposedly temporary social legislation, namely, the NRA. What happened? Progress stopped. We began to slide back. We lost most of what we had gained. And this has been repeated many times.

Opposition Helpful.

Now, as I have said, the lag in social progress is due to Mr. Roosevelt's failure to follow constitutional methods. Let me dwell on this point for just a moment because it may clarify our entire present situation. Under our constitutional method the President makes recommendations to Congress. He turns over the drafting of legislation to the legislators. Members of Congress investigate all phases thoroughly. They hold public hearings. They allow almost everyone who is interested to come in and have his say. They discuss the pitfalls, the loopholes, all the things that may go wrong. They listen particularly to the opposition—to the people who don't want the legislation. Incidentally this is a phase that Mr. Roosevelt does not seem to understand. He does not want to let the opposition talk. But if you ask any man who understands drafting legislation, he will tell you that the opposition is your biggest help. They tell you all the things that are wrong. They tell you all the reason why it won't work. They give you the information that enables you to plug up the loopholes and draft a law that will work after it is passed.

Now this may seem a slow, tiresome method, in terms of weeks or months, but if you look back over a period of four and one-half years it would have been very rapid indeed, if through that method he had obtained some legislation that was workable.

Cites NRA Failure.

But what did Mr. Roosevelt do? He refused to call in able legislators with years of experience. He turned drafting of the legislation over to some college sophomores. He handed it to Congress in a package and said in effect: "Pass it this way without crossing a "t" or dotting an "i."

For example: When the NRA was passed his avowed purposes met with approval. But the NRA did not work. As everyone knows, it was a miserable failure. Don't take my word alone for this. Ask Mr. Roosevelt himself. He admits that it failed, but excuses it all on the basis that it was well intended. Yet despite the fact that NRA did not work in practice, Mr. Roosevelt continues to insist upon adoption of its theory in one form or another, thus making the same mistake over and over again.

The social security act is another example of the same policy. It is well intended. It is something that is necessary in our country. Practically every one of them disagreed, not with the idea but with the form Mr. Roosevelt was jamming through. For social security is at least the one thing in which all citizens should be treated equally. The present law does not do so. It will be changed to correct its error when it is dealt with intelligently. This is necessary because Mr. Roosevelt failed to follow constitutional procedure in drafting it.

Morally Worse Off.

Let us next consider the question of relief. I do not need to tell you that relief has been made a political football. You have seen examples all around you. Unemployment was our biggest problem when Mr. Roosevelt came into office in 1933. It is still our biggest problem. I believe we are morally worse off now than we were then, because at that time everyone at least wanted to work if he could find a job. The present policy of relief may be all right for those who want to stay on relief, but to the self-respecting man there can be only one question: When do we go back to work?

There is another situation in America today which is holding back industrial recovery perhaps more than any one single thing, and that is taxes. Not just the amount of taxes, but the confusion over taxes. No one knows from one year to the next what is going to happen. How can the country go ahead under such conditions? Isn't it time, instead of jaunting across the country, that someone stayed home long enough to work out a program of tax legislation that would not have to be changed every year?

Ladies and gentlemen: I think we are all glad to find a growing sentiment that the Constitution works when you give it a chance to work. I believe you must be realizing by now that our good old Constitution, instead of being a horse and buggy, is a roaring motorcar, compared to the progress we have been making.

Now I would like to make a prediction—prediction about the Wagner labor act. Again, "his heart may be in the right place." Again his intentions were the best in the world. But again constitutional procedure was not followed.

Step in Right Direction.

And I want to make this prediction: That once more you will find an unworkable, messed-up piece of legislation that will have to be done all over again. True, it is a step in the right direction. It is a move in the direction of collective bargaining. Despite its present weaknesses and failings, we should place our feet squarely upon this act. The wisdom and fairness of the people will eventually bring about a modification so that the justice and equality of all rights, including that of the public, will be recognized.

But at the present time there are many lawyers in this country (not corporation lawyers, but labor lawyers) who will tell you that they have already found so many holes in it that it looks like a sieve. Here, again, a worthy cause will be seriously hurt if it is not corrected immediately. Incidentally, I suppose next week I will be accused by the Administration of being anti-labor because I dared to criticize the Wagner act. But, if I am thus accused, I will have plenty of company, for our recognized labor leaders are criticizing the operation of the act.

Mr. Roosevelt's policies in dealing with labor problems have not only been unsatisfactory, they have been dangerous. It is his specific duty to maintain order when local authorities do not do so. It is his duty to protect the working man. It is his duty to protect property.

All to Be Done Over.

But when trouble came he again failed to follow the Constitution. He failed to protect either the men or the property. Of course, the property can be restored. But the deplorable thing was he did not protect human life. Men were shot and clubbed. And, according to press reports, the President shrugged his shoulders. He said it was a local affair. He said: "A plague on both their houses," and went on another vacation.

I have given you the basic reason for the lag of social progress in our country—I have given you numerous examples of legislation, each of which had its heart in the right place, but all of which will have to be done over again because constitutional procedure was not followed.

Now I want to give you an example of what happens when a piece of social legislation is drafted according to constitutional procedure by men who really understand the art of drafting legislation.

About the year 1905 New York State took up the question of revising insurance laws for the protection of insurance companies and the protection of policyholders. A certain small group of men attacked the problem. And after months of arduous toil (it may have seemed awfully long at the time), they worked out a program of legislative reform. That law is still in effect with only slight modifications. The same basic law has been adopted by many other States.

Praise for Chief Justice.

Twenty-five years later our country was struck by the greatest depression in the memory of living man. Those insurance companies, incorporated in States which had drafted similar laws, represented the one investment of the average man that stood up.

There is one man in the United States to whom we can be thankful as much as to any one else for this great piece of social legislation that stood the test of a generation, and that man is Mr. Charles Evans Hughes, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. It was Chief Justice Hughes, heading an investigation, who made recommendations from which our sound insurance policy was built.

But there is another tradition in which our constitutional form of government, which holds that when a man is to be appointed to an important non-elective office he shall be submitted to the scrutiny and white light of public hearings. The spirit of our Constitution, like our marriage ceremony, states that if any one has reason to show why a man should not be appointed to a public office, "let him come forward and speak."

I am referring to Justice Hugo Black. I think it is fitting to refer to this because it is another case in which Constitutional procedure was ignored. There was a demand for public hearing, not only on the part of private citizens, but by United States Senators. But the Administration used all its mighty power to prevent such public hearings—to prevent the operation of our Constitutional methods of Government.

Foreign Policy May Be Tragic.

Now, regardless of what side you take in this case, I believe everyone agrees that if the Constitution had been followed, all of the information concerning Mr. Black would have been presented to the American public before Mr. Black was confirmed. This is one of the important incidents to which I referred. I think it illustrates graphically that the Constitution does work when you give it a chance to work.

And now I come to the second point of tremendous importance to our country: The second point which I said I wanted to discuss with you this evening. I have pointed out the lag in social progress which has been caused by failure to follow the spirit of our Constitution. These mistakes have been costly. They have set us back repeatedly, but they can be corrected.

Now, however, we are faced with a situation where he may make a mistake that would indeed be tragic, that might lead to war. The President's impulsive quarter-backing, his readiness to assume the responsibility of a one-man Government in international affairs, is far more dangerous than the same tendencies in dealing with domestic matters.

Rightly, we may ask the question the world is asking: How far does he intend to go?

In a recent declaration of his international policy, Mr. Roosevelt said that if the rest of the world is at war, "Let no one imagine America can escape peacefully."

He spoke of quarantines, which mean either economic sanctions or blockade. Our experience with Italy has proven the ineffectiveness of economic sanctions, and blockade means war. The statement that America cannot escape peacefully when the rest of the world is at war sounds just like what we were told in 1917.

By the time the special session of Congress convenes it is to be hoped the President will have thought out what he proposes to do. Close observers have increasing doubts if he thought his recent declaration through to its logical conclusion. Moreover, Congress adopted a neutrality act at the last session. The President took it upon himself to repeal the principle of the act. Now, the job for the Congress will be to decide whether the President's own policy is to followed or whether we are to adhere to the policies which the last Congress adopted.

I am not surprised that the American people have been willing to grasp at anything that might appear to be new and different. We must remember that it is hard to think straight on an empty stomach. We must remember that when you are cold and hungry and you don't know where your next meal is coming from, you can't become very much interested in abstract principles of government. But now we have had ample time to find out how some of the new theories are working out. We have had time to appreciate that social progress would have been years ahead today if we had followed Constitutional methods during the last four and one-half years.

Intensely Practical.

I do not believe in the Constitution because I think it is sacred. I reverence it because it is so intensely practical—because it works when you give it a chance to work.

We have heard too much lately about liberty and freedom as something belonging to the mind and to the soul. Liberty and freedom, after all, are merely means to an end.

The four great scourges of the average man are unemployment, sickness, accident and penniless old age. Unless liberty and freedom can help us overcome them, liberty and freedom are nothing but empty phrases.

The liberty and freedom for which our forefathers fought meant something concrete, tangible and immediately beneficial. Today it must mean something just as definite to us if we are to fight for its preservation. Liberty and freedom should enable all who want work to get good jobs at good wages. Liberty and freedom should mean that men and women have decent hours of work and satisfactory working conditions. Liberty and freedom should mean that a man have leisure to spend with his wife and children and the right to an old age of peace and comfort. Freedom must mean that with reasonable effort a man can acquire these things as a matter of right and not because some kind-hearted employer is willing to let him have them.

Liberty's Intent.

Liberty and freedom should mean a fair distribution of the rewards of production and should prevent an unhealthy concentration of wealth and economic power in individual hands or government. Liberty and freedom should mean that a man may have the opportunity to acquire possessions of his own, business of his own, and that the corner grocer or the little factory worker will not be discriminated against, either by great privileged competitors or by government. Liberty and freedom should mean the right to a fair earning power and a decent standard of living to the farmer. Liberty and freedom should mean the right to support a government which provides the opportunity to happiness and economic security and the free choice to criticize or oppose it if a man does not agree with it. And, of course, liberty and freedom must mean the opportunity to worship as one's conscience dictates, and the right to a fair trial.

This is the kind of liberty and freedom that you and I and the Republican party of today stand for. If our party did not stand for these things you and I would not want to be Republicans.

But there is one additional feature that distinguishes us. We believe that we can solve our problems as free men under a constitutional government, in which we have a voice in the solution of our problems. We do not believe we are helpless, incompetent and unable to solve our own problems. We do not believe we must turn our problems over to any one man to tell us what we must do in order to be wise and competent. We do not believe that it is necessary to give up what we already have in order to gain additional things we want.

Roosevelt "Changed."

During the first few months of Mr. Roosevelt's Administration he awakened a new social consciousness. I was in sincere sympathy and agreement with many of the purposes set forth.

But now I must say something that I regret to admit: Mr. Roosevelt is a changed man. He is not the man who was elected in 1932.

It is apparent that Mr. Roosevelt is going through the same process that transpired in the life of every man in history who was given too much power. Power feeds on power—today just as it did in the days of Julius Caesar. And while I feel that Mr. Roosevelt should be given every honor that is due him, the time has come when we must change our methods in Washington. Every fair-minded man must concede that many of the questions Mr. Roosevelt has asked are proper, but it must also be conceded that his answers don't work.

When Congress convened in the last session, there were many important pieces of legislation pressing for enactment. But what did Mr. Roosevelt do? He wasted practically the entire session of Congress of 1937 fighting to get more power for himself.

Now the President has just called a special session of Congress. In making his announcement, he outlined commendable purposes. All agree with them. That makes it unanimous again. But, how is he going to achieve them? First, of course, he asks for more power.

Reorganization Plan Hit.

His Government reorganization bill, regardless of what he has said about it, has for its main purpose the placing of practically every Federal employe under the thumb of the President, to be hired and fired at his discretion. It would also place the semi-judicial commissions under the control of the Executive. It will precipitate another controversy just as important as that which occurred in regard to the Supreme Court, because once again he strikes at the very heart of constitutional representative government.

I have pointed out to you the different ways in which our President has violated the letter and spirit of the Constitution. I have proven to you in each case our country unmistakably would have been better off if he had followed the Constitution. From this there can be only one conclusion: If we are to go forward from here, it must be under the practical guidance of that great document. Mr. Roosevelt asks for more power, and still more power, to accomplish his purposes. As long as he uses lack of power as an alibi, we will never make any real progress. Most of the mistakes he has made have been made because he has been given too much power. What he really needs is less power—a position that will force him to take the advice and counsel of other men of both parties—men whose hearts also are in the right place, but men who have had more experience and who know more about the practical application of government than he does.
